Wise Mrs. Snyder Beware Hard Hat, and Collar

Nature's Fine Balance You'll Sit on Explosives

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921.

Mrs. Frederick Snyder of Goshen, N. Y., nips things in the bud. With cancer operate at once, also with what is worse than cancer, any attempt to interfere with your husband.

Mrs. Snyder arrested Miss Alice Tenberg, eighteen, and younger than Mrs. Snyder.

"What did she do?" asked the judge. "Went motoring with my husband. I saw them laughing together."

"What else did they do?" "Nothing, but I want that stopped."

Wise Mrs. Snyder, how much wiser than the lady that lets things drift along, eating her soul out, then ends by shooting "Mr. Snyder" and writing a diary about it.

Stop it when it starts. Your husband will think all the more of you.

He knows well that he is guilty, more or less, in thought or deed, and he'll say to himself, "I've got a smart wife."

Things happen indirectly. Young men with wasp waists leave the lowest waistcoat button unfastened because the late King Edward of England had a fat little stomach. The bottom waistcoat button pinched him so he unfastened it—that became the fashion.

The automobile is curing baldness by making the hard derby hat unpopular. The stiff derby, making a mark around your head, stops circulation of blood in the scalp, and the hair dies and falls out.

Women, wearing foolish, but loose hats, rarely get bald. You noticed that? In a derby you cannot lean back comfortably in your motor. The rich that control fashion, ride daily in motors. Hence fewer derby hats now, and later you'll see fewer bald heads. That is more important to many men than the disarmament conference.

Tight, stiff hats, mean baldness. Tight, high, stiff collars pressing on the neck's great blood vessels and on the pneumogastric nerve cause nervousness and ill-health. Remember that as long as you live.

Contemplating hard hats and stiff collars, observe how nature keeps all things balanced in spite of our foolishness. Gravitation would unite all the matter of the universe in one great lump, if you let it alone, and the lump would go sailing, sooner or later, across space, no pretty moon or stars. Newton's law puzzled the wise. Then radio activity was discovered, balancing gravitation by hurling atoms into space, counteracting gravity.

The Ku Klux want to organize at Trenton, N. J. The American Legion does not want them. Mayor Donnelly says he will keep out the Ku Klux. Balance there.

You have the Masons that do not approve the Knights of Columbus, and vice versa, you have the Y. M. C. A., strictly limiting the number of young Jews admitted.

The Socialists oppose the Federation of Labor, the I. W. W. dislikes both, and the Anarchists object to everything. And "within the shadow," Supreme Wisdom is keeping them all balanced, using them in ways little dreamed of.

When you ride in your Ford, a year from now, you will be sitting on an explosive, but it won't explode. Henry Ford, intelligent person, has bought from England 5,000,000 pounds of cordite, highest explosive known, and is having it made into automobile leather by special process.

Hundreds of millions' worth of high explosives made for war, going to waste, were thought worth nothing. They are all to be made into coverings for furniture, automobiles, even pretty linings for coffins. That is better than using the stuff to make customers for coffins.

The able managers of the Du Pont company had long ago made leather with by-products of their explosive plant. Ford is using the mechanical supplies of explosives for the same purpose.

The ex-Kaiser, writing to his brother-in-law, King of Greece, congratulates him on victories over the Turks, reminds him that King Constantine is ruling in Asia Minor railroads that "I built."

It was not exactly "I," the Kaiser, that built the railroads. German workers and engineers built them, with German money and energy. The Kaiser, however, encourage and develop such work.

And had he been content with that, satisfied to be remembered as "William the Builder," how different for him and the German people. But he wanted another title "William the Great," a little that just comes, you can't build it.

The body was found by Henry J. Gallagher of Canton, an employe of the postoffice.

Morris, who was one of ten children, five boys and five girls, was a student at Boston University and a graduate of the Portland public schools. His death followed a collision between the car in which he was riding with four companions and a trolley car. Crowds stormed the trolley car after the smash.

TODAY COOLEST AUG. 22 IN TWENTY-SIX YEARS

Today was the coolest August 22 in 26 years. Cranberry crops along the cape were menaced. It was 55 degrees in Boston at 7 o'clock this morning. Temperatures ranging as low as 38 degrees were reported from some Cape towns. Here is the official forecast: "Fair and not much change in temperature tonight and Tuesday. Moderate north to northeast winds." The coolest August 22 in Weather Bureau history was in 1890.

White House Denies Reports Mellon Has Resigned

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 22—Formal denial of reports that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has resigned was made by the White House today.

"The President has not received Secretary Mellon's resignation, nor has he had any intimation that the Secretary has any desire to resign, and published reports to the contrary are incorrect," Secretary to the President Christian said.

Following the defeat in his tax revision program at the hands of Congress, reports were circulated here that the Secretary of the Treasury was greatly displeased. The White House denied any knowledge of such an attitude on the part of the Secretary.

WEEK END WAVE OF CRIME

Police of Greater City on Alert; Shots Are Fired in Somerville

Greater Boston was swept by a crime wave involving offences ranging all the way from sneak thievery and burglary to alleged abduction and incendiarism within the last few hours.

Police of the city and surrounding communities are puzzled by the week-end outbreak.

One man was shot and three escaped during a fight between State police and alleged burglars in Somerville.

Greater Boston camps are being searched for two Revere girls whose parents fear their daughters have been abducted.

A big downtown fire is being probed, incendiarism being suspected.

A partial catalogue of the crimes which have puzzled the forces of law and order follows:

Attempt made to loot Winslow Garrett's drugstore, No. 348 Beacon street, Somerville. One shot, three escaped, during gun battle with police.

The car in which they are supposed to have escaped was later found in Cambridge. It was stolen yesterday in Boston.

Alice Blye and Carmen Folsom, Revere High School girls, strangely missing. Believed held against their wills in a Summer camp.

Lawrence City Stables partially destroyed. Loss of $40,000. Incendiarism is suspected.

Braintree sneak thieves climax a cold campaign by Duffy forces at leading music store of that town.

WEYMOUTH TRAGEDY.

Wilfred Paquin, seventeen, and Hervey Chagnon, nineteen, arrested in Lawrence charged with attempting to hold up an unidentified man.

One man fatally wounded and two others arrested in a gun battle when Thomas B. Hendricks discovered three men looting his gasoline shop at Washington and Main streets, Weymouth. Wounded man died.

Gangsters assail Mr. and Mrs. William Harvey of Lynn and are beaten off after a furious battle. The woman is seriously injured by a blow to the jaw.

John Kuchinis is dirked in a fight at a wedding. Victim is at Lawrence General Hospital. Joseph Valkevicius, alleged assailant, is under arrest.

The most serious of these crimes, the attempted robbery of the Garrett drug store in Somerville and the resultant gun battle, was discovered by State Detective Edward H. Murtagh of the Duffy forces at Cambridge. He surprised the men in the store and they took to flight. He called them to halt and they continued to run. He opened fire and one of the fugitives dropped.

Further on Patrolman Kane of Somerville jumped in front of the automobile in which the three other burglars were escaping, but all speed was put on. It is stated one of the robbers fired, and Kane saved his life only by a nimble leap to one side.

The wounded man gave his name as W. Leahy, eighteen years old, and said he lived at No. 571 Somerville avenue, Somerville. He was taken under guard to the Somerville Hospital.

Chester Bowles, twenty-five years old, of Rockland, was the ringleader in the Weymouth robbery and fight. He was married and the father of four children.

Hendricks surprised Bowles and

FACTION CHIEFS ARE CALLED TO DUBLIN

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 22.—In an effort to find a way out of the Irish peace deadlock and to clear the way towards a solution, a general parley of leaders of all factions and shades of opinion will be held in Dublin tomorrow, it was announced this afternoon.

It is understood that the conferees will vote upon the English terms. Official circles are hopeful that this modified referendum will be in favor of the English offer, thus allowing the members of Dail Eireann, who are on record in favor of rejection, to bow gracefully to public opinion.

In addition to the Sinn Fein leaders the churches and business interests will be represented tomorrow.

Secret Message May Speed Peace

Dublin, Aug. 22.—Dail Eireann (Sinn Fein Parliament) went into secret executive session at noon today after a delay of an hour, occasioned by a long private conference between Eamon de Valera and Michael Collins, the commander-in-chief of the Irish Republican Army.

It was reported that De Valera had received a dispatch from some quarter which made it necessary to confer at length with Collins. It was understood that this latter had a hearing upon Dail Eireann's peace deliberations and that it might hasten peace.

Dail Eireann was scheduled to convene at 11 o'clock, but it was 12 o'clock before De Valera arrived. He drove up in a motor car, accompanied by Collins, Countess Markievicz and Miss Mary MacSwiney, sister of the late Lord Mayor of Cork, who has just returned from the United States.

Harry Boland, De Valera's secretary, who arrived from America yesterday, conferred with a number of prominent Sinn Feiners.

Boland paid a big compliment to the Hearst newspapers, asserting the present strength of the Irish cause was attributable to the influential support of these newspapers in America.

He shelved a heat of questions

Wreck of Auto That Cost a Life

Everett Man Killed When Machine Hit Heavy Motor Truck in Saugus.

One Dead, One Hurt in Collision of Auto and Truck in Saugus

A man believed to be William A. Spear, of No. 159 Beach street, Everett, was almost instantly killed today when the machine in which he was riding struck a motor truck at Essex street and the Newburyport Turnpike, Saugus.

Edward L. O'Connor, of Treadwell terrace, Lynn, who was driving the truck for Daube's Bread Company of Lynn, was thrown to the street, sustaining severe cuts and bruises as well as a sprained right ankle.

According to witnesses of the accident O'Connor was driving the truck west of Essex street when, at the corner of the turnpike, he saw the other car coming at considerable speed. He attempted to swerve, but it was too late.

The car struck the truck a glancing blow and overturned, rolling over several times, and coming to rest at last with the driver pinned under the seat, the wheel driven into his breast.

Passing automobiles picked up the injured man and rushed him to the Melrose Hospital, but he was dead when he arrived there.

The truck was only slightly injured, but the car was a total wreck.

CHILDREN GIVE 'MOVIE' MONEY TO CUNEOS

Two little Back Bay girls have donated their whole week's "movie money" to the Boston American Cuneo Fund for the benefit of the widow and nine children of Patrolman Andrew H. Cuneo, who was killed while performing his duty.

They are Georgia and Norma Erd, aged thirteen and fourteen respectively, and they call all other children in Boston to make a similar sacrifice in order that the little wife and daughters of the slain policeman have food and fuel and comfort and that their mamma will not have to worry about bills.

Georgia and Norma have not only hit upon an idea that could easily be developed, but their suggestion should be adopted by grown-ups who might deprive themselves of some little pleasure or luxury in order to help a worthy cause.

U. S. Cruiser Leaves Navy Yard for Hampton Roads for Marines to Aid Costa Rica

The United States cruiser Galveston, commanded by Captain Clarence S. Kempff, left the Charlestown Navy Yard this afternoon for Hampton Roads, where she will pick up a detachment of marines for duty in the Canal Zone.

The Galveston has been ordered to the Canal Zone for duty with a special squadron. She has a complement of 400 men.

No marines have been sent from the Charlestown Navy Yard.

Battleship Off With Marines to Panama

By Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—The United States battleship Pennsylvania, with 400 marines for duty in Panama aboard, passed out the Delaware Capes today. The exact destination of the force was not made known and officials of the Philadelphia Navy Yard declared not even the commanding officers knew the duty they were to perform upon arrival in the Canal Zone.

Rush orders to prepare supplies for the marines, who were sent here from their base at Quantico, Va., were received yesterday by telephone from the Navy Department, and the yard forces worked throughout the night loading the Pennsylvania with equipment for a prolonged stay away from base.

The decision to augment American forces already in the Canal Zone apparently was reached suddenly, as the Pennsylvania, which was en route from New York to Pacific waters, was ordered by wireless to proceed to Philadelphia and take on the marines. The battleship was stopped at the Delaware Breakwater and the marine companies were taken directly from their trains to fighters and sent down the Delaware River to their transport.

States is sitting tight today watching a boiling pot in Latin America."

This government, having informed Panama that the United States "does not feel compelled to suggest" that Costa Rica delay longer in taking over the disputed territory on that Panama-Costa Rica boundary, which was awarded to Costa Rica by the White award, and having ordered a battalion of marines to Panama, is awaiting further developments.

It is generally believed here that the "soldiers of the sea" will receive orders in Panama to supervise the taking over of the disputed territory if trouble threatens.

Narciso Garay, Foreign Minister of Panama, who has been here as head of a mission seeking to have the United States change its attitude on the boundary dispute, stated that the Republic of Panama would not use force in an effort to thwart the execution of the White award and denied the need of this government using force to put the award into effect.

Under terms of international law marines may be landed in a foreign country to protect American rights without a declaration of war. It is this law which probably has prompted the sending of marines into Panama, for there are now sufficient army forces in Panama to resist any effort on the part of any Central American army.

Costa Rica has advised the United States that it is ready to exercise its jurisdiction over the disputed land, and in view of the action of this government it is expected that the White award will be made immediately effective, thus ending a controversy of some years standing.

ANITA BALDWIN SAYS EUROPE IS IMPOSSIBLE

Profiteers Still Flourishing, Warns Heiress to Millions

New York, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Anita Baldwin, formerly of Brookline, Mass., beautiful daughter of the late "Lucky" Baldwin and heiress to the millions he made as a turf plunger, returned from France aboard the Aquitania.

Her advice to Americans wishing to make the continental tour in comfort is:

"Don't go to Europe."

Mrs. Baldwin brings back some very uncomplimentary views of the continent as it is at present organized.

It is the land of the profiteer, bad plumbing, ever-ripe eggs and villainous roadside inns.

Its bathing beaches are farces, she says. While the rebuilding of Ypres is going forward rapidly, she found that other battlefields were scenes of absolute desolation.

France is no place, she concludes, for an American millionaire, still less for poor people.

"The ordinary citizen of France has no more idea of bodily comfort than he had before 1914," says Mrs. Baldwin.

"It's a penal offence to ask for an egg at a roadside inn. Profiteering is still rampant. They ask 100 francs for champagne. The American taxi driver is a babe in the wood compared with the French taxi robber.

"When my European friends want to see me again they will have to come to America. Europe is impossible."

Mrs. Baldwin was touring with her son and S. F. McLeod, her secretary. She turned over her letters of credit to Paris Post No. 1 of the American Legation and the American Hospital Building Fund.

3 KNOWN DEAD IN GEORGIA HOTEL FIRE

Believe Other Victims Will Be Found When Macon Ruins Are Searched

By Associated Press.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 22.—Three persons are known to have lost their lives in a fire which destroyed the Brown House, a frame hotel here, early today. Firemen expressed belief that the death list would be materially increased when the ruins had been explored.

John K. Hays, a former justice of the peace, was among the dead. The bodies of two men taken from the second floor of the building today have not been identified.

Approximately twenty of the 150 guests of the hotel were injured. The fire followed an explosion of chemicals in an adjoining drugstore. One side of the hotel was blown in.

Many guests were cut off from the stairs by the first blast of flames, and the greater part of these had only one means of egress—leaping from windows. Hays was fatally hurt in jumping from an upper window.

The Brown House was the oldest hotel in the city and was located close to the center of the business district. The flames from the wooden structure, spreading to adjoining buildings, burned practically half of the block from Plum street to Poplar street.

FORD CHEMISTS TO STARTLE THE WORLD

Predict "Flivver" Locomotives of New Alloy of Steel to Supplant Moguls

This is the second of a series of articles on the ideas of Henry Ford, the automobile wizard, for rehabilitating the transportation systems of the country. These ideas already have been tested, for in the last few months Mr. Ford has applied them to the operation of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad which he recently purchased, and they have turned the road, which has heretofore been a failure, into a successful enterprise.

By RICHARD LEE.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1921, by Universal Service)

Detroit, Aug. 22.—One trip of fifteen minutes' duration through Henry Ford's experimental shops and laboratories at Dearborn, Mich., would be enough to convince any doubting Thomas that the Ford plans for revolutionizing railroading is no visionary dream.

There his entire force of engineers and draftsmen so long engaged in perfecting the automobile to a point where a daily output of 5,000 cars became possible has been turned loose on modernizing railroad equipment. The thing in everyone's mind today naturally is the seventy-ton Ford locomotive, but that is merely one of a hundred schemes on foot.

ALLOY PROCESS

Upon the chemical laboratories have fallen the burden of the work in the production of the 75-ton locomotive which will do the work of the present day ones weighing 200 tons. It is upon the steel to be produced by an alloy process cutting the weight two-thirds while sacrificing none of the strength that the new era locomotive depends.

For that purpose the so-called River Rouge plant, previously dedicated to the production of Fordson tractors, is being rapidly fitted up for construction of locomotives. About that plant no secret is made of the firm belief that it will one day be the producer of more than half of the locomotives in use upon the railroads of the world.

Until recently all the railroad lines which Ford & Son acquired through purchase of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad have been overhauled or rebuilt in the Rouge plant. While that work was going on Ford himself spent half his time in those shops and usually down in the pits with the workmen.

It was then and there that Ford made the discovery that through all these years we had been deceiving ourselves in the belief that we had been making progress in railroad engineering. He went straight to his own engineers and actually started the production of a new equipment destined to make some history in transportation.

NEW OILING SCHEME.

As an illustration of the manner in which the Ford mind works there is nothing better than a seemingly insignificant incident during one of his trips of inspection over his railroad.

He hiked along—half the time making a real inspection of the property he was undertaking to operate. He found a train at Napoleon where crews were packing off waste about the axles.

In three minutes he had acquired all the history of railroad methods in lubrication of car axles. He said nothing, but the next day upon his return to Dearborn he dropped into the engineering department with all the general details for application of an oiling system to car axles which will call for oiling every three months.

It took only a few weeks of management of the D. T. & I. to convince the automobile manufacturer that the old-fashioned unbusinesslike system of accounting constituted as heavy a handicap about the railroads as did their backwardness in engineering. It was on the business end that he made the big "cleanup."

Aside from the order placing all employees under the $6-a-day minimum wage rule, the Ford innovation most interesting was the observance of the Sabbath order.

Operation of a railroad on Sunday is all nonsense, according to the Ford ideas. At present he is moving only perishable goods, and in the future he expects to have traffic moving in such a fashion that from Saturday night until Monday morning not one single wheel will turn on the system.

RUSSIAN CRISIS SEEN AS VITAL TO WORLD

Edging Out of Lenin Would Bring Chaos and War, Hapgood Says

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

Staff Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The crisis that faces the world in its dealings with Russia is not less than the complex puzzle of Central Europe or the growing problem of the Pacific.

One of the most distinguished statesmen of the Republican Party in a letter to me says:

"But the way in which the thing will work itself out is not clear. The peasant is an ox, and he has some ideas he never had before, and a very acute sense of property, but it is hard for him to find leadership.

"If Lenin should supply the need and put himself at the head of the new bourgeoisie things might become stable in Russia, but if he does not the chaos will have to make its blind way somewhat longer and evolve something else. It is hard to put one's faith in chaos, or at least to make a definite prophecy in advance of how it will do its work."

LENIN DECRIES CHAOS.

Lenin has no faith in chaos, and if it comes it will be either because he is killed or because foreigners are able to shatter his organization by the parent of peace. The most dangerous notion lodged in the brains of some of those who still control the relief work from outside is that they can edge Lenin out of power and edge into his place one of their own type.

If they do edge Lenin out they will usher in, in his stead, either chaos or a government relying on foreign bayonets. It will mean chaos again before long, probably followed in the end by a war of liberation by the Russian masses against the intruders.

The vivid picture of Lenin's efforts to lead the extreme radicals toward accepting capitalism, which Louise Bryant has drawn in the Boston American, confirms the conclusion reached by outside students of the available documents, wherever such students approach the facts scientifically and not with passion.

SHARP WORDS IN SPEECHES.

For months Lenin's speeches have been full of sharp words designed to shake the unruly out of his more extreme and less intelligent followers.

For example: "Private business and foreign concessions bring back capitalism to Russia." "Whoever tries to explain it away is comforting himself with empty words."

Lenin is the only ruler I know of who has a distrust of empty words. That he can use the power after reversing his policy, and explaining the reversal with such ruthless clearness, is a tribute both to his own greatness and to the instinct of the Russian people.

As far as my experience goes, when other rulers change their policies they blow themselves up to explain that they have not made any change at all. Lenin, on the other hand, talks like this:

"We must not attempt to hide anything. We must say openly that the peasants are discontented with the relations that far worked out between them and us, that they do not want these relations, and that they therefore must be changed. We must reckon with this fact—and we must be objective in our politics."

Again: "We went further than was necessary either from a theoretical or political standpoint."

CRIME TO DODGE FACTS.

"It would be the greatest crime," he observes, "not to admit the fact."

The foreigners who are about to enter Russia with their relief ought to be led by men who realize that what is really taking place is not that a modified capitalism can take place the place of the Czar, but that there take place under the dictatorship of American capitalists and French politicians.

It would be well also if those in power in Washington would reflect seriously on these words of H. G. Wells:

"Fear the disorganization of the railway system of Russia by Polish invasions and civil wars, the vacillating cruelties of trans-Atlantic policy are largely responsible."

That statement is rough, but it is true. Mr. Harding took office intending to undo Mr. Wilson's mistake in this respect. He has merely continued it.

DECISION ON SHIPS.

Today Judge Martin T. Manton in New York will receive briefs on the question of whether the Russian ships Peace and Tobolsken belong to the Soviet government or to Boris Bakhmetev.

If these ships happened to be in a British harbor they would belong to the Soviets. The same decision would be made if they were in a German harbor, and the Italian cabinet has, within a few days, approved an agreement similar to the German and British agreements.

In this event, which the ships will probably be added to Mr. Bakhmetev's other property, and thus the cruel joke to which Mr. Wilson refers will be carried on.

JAMAICA PLAIN MAN HURT IN 20-FOOT FALL

Frank Salarno, seventy-two years old, of No. 14 Burnett street, Jamaica Plain, sustained injuries to his head and arms and a fractured leg, when he fell twenty feet into an excavation on Firth street in Stony Brook reservation. Salarno was crossing a temporary bridge over the excavation when he slipped and fell. He was taken to the City Hospital.

showered on him by newspapermen, but added:

"We hope everything comes out all right."

Boland reached the Mansion House just one hour ahead of President De Valera and the Sinn Fein cabinet. They immediately entered into a secret conference. It is believed the meeting was caused by a highly important message Boland has brought from leaders of the Irish movement in the United States.

AWAIT WORD FROM U. S.

There is no gainsaying that the Dail has been awaiting this message before making any definite reply to the peace offers of Lloyd George. The conference lasted many hours.

Denies Ulster Has Received Overtures

Belfast, Ireland, Aug. 22.—(By Associated Press.)—Reports that have been in circulation here to the effect that overtures had been made to Ulster either by the Sinn Fein or on behalf of it were emphatically contradicted today by Colonel Spender, secretary of the Ulster Cabinet.

Sir James Craig, the Premier, returned to Belfast this morning from a holiday outing in Scotland. A meeting of the Cabinet will be held tomorrow.

REV. R. S. MacARTHUR LAUDS LLOYD GEORGE

"Peace in Ireland will come as a great disappointment to many American Irish," declared Rev. Robert Stuart MacArthur, D. D., preaching in Tremont Temple.

"God grant that peace may come to Ireland," the pastor continued, "but if it does, it will disappoint many American Irish, for they will lose their vocation. They live on trouble, and their chief business in life is to stir up strife. They won't know what to do when peace comes."

The clergyman called Lloyd George "our good friend and brother," and said if the British Premier brings about peace in Ireland he will have achieved the greatest feat in history."

his companions after an all-night vigil. He waited until they were well inside the store before ordering them to surrender.

They ran and he immediately opened fire. One of them, since identified as Bowles, dropped. The Hendricks pursuers ran to a waiting automobile and captured them. They gave their names as Thomas F. McAuliffe of No. 87 Webster street, Rockland, and Fred H. McCaffrey, eighteen years old, of No. 469 Main street, Rockland.

Hendricks marched his captives to the police station after getting aid for Bowles. But Bowles died without regaining consciousness.

The disappearance of Misses Blye and Folsom, Revere High School girls, is causing the authorities more concern than any other development of the week-end.

It is feared the double disappearance means another sordid tragedy of the kind which has become so familiar lately—the friendly offer of an automobile ride, the abduction, the detention in some Summer camp, frequently by young thugs of the Parisian apache order.

The mothers of the vanished girls are on the point of nervous breakdown.

The continued success of the Braintree sneak thieves is causing no little criticism of the police in that town as no business men are safe and even houses have been visited, it is alleged.

The crop of crimes of violence in Lawrence was even larger than usual and the climax, perpetrated by gangsters, is a striking commentary on the lengths to which crime is being carried there by young street corner loafers and petty criminals.

ROBBERY CASE IN COURT.

Francis Hogan, twenty-two years old, of Parker street, Roxbury, and Thomas Lennon, alias Kelley, twenty-five, of Conant street, Roxbury, pleaded not guilty in Roxbury Court today to the charge of robbery. Hearing was continued until August 31. They are charged with robbing Martin Steed of No. 38 Parker street, Dorchester, of $66 and his watch and chain Saturday night. Steed was in court today on a charge of drunkenness. His case was filed.

Fred Lanzendorfer of No. 4251 Washington street, Roslindale, pleaded not guilty in Roxbury Court to the charge of larceny of $118 from the John B. Sawyer drug store, Centre street, Jamaica Plain. His case was continued to September 6, and he was held in $800. It is alleged that Lanzendorfer was in the rear of the drug store Saturday near the safe. The clerk was called to the front of the store and it is charged that on his return the money had been taken from the safe.

PEGGY JOYCE MEETS HUSBAND'S CO-RESPONDENT AT GIDDY DEAUVILLE

ACTRESS IS INVITED TO DINNER

By C. F. BERTELLI,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Deauville, France, Aug. 22.—Pausing in Paris only long enough to purchase two of the latest gowns, noteworthy for their extreme decolletage Peggy Hopkins Joyce motored here and immediately rushed to the races.

At the races, as it fate had conspired in her favor, Peggy encountered Henri Letellier, publisher and the world's greatest expert on lovely women. Letellier has been named as co-respondent in J. Stanley Joyce's suit against the wife he claims cost him a million dollars in fourteen months. The meeting occurred just before the running of the Grand Prix.

PILCER A SENSATION.

"I've come 5,000 miles to demand whether you really said I was not beautiful," pretty Peggy expostulated.

Aghast, Letellier stammered a denial, following his apologies with an invitation for dinner.

Peggy was not heard to decline the invitation.

But if the arrival of the much-married show girl here caused a sensation, "the sandwich dance" inaugurated on the beach by Harry Pilcer provided an anti-climax with a greater thrill. The redoubtable Harry enthralled his spectators by doing a "split step" between two beautiful Parisiennes, all attired in one-piece bathing suits.

10 COSTUMES DAILY.

Paris dressmakers who have moved here for the season are doing an enormous business due to the discovery by American women that at least ten changes of costume are necessary daily. These may be enumerated as follows:

Flowery kimona for the "dawn bath."

Organdie slip for breakfast.

Tweed breeches and Norfolk jacket or "Amazon" costume for horseback riding.

Low-cut silk bathing suit of one piece for fashionable sun bath.

Tailor-made suit for the "cocktail" hour.

Silk jersey for luncheon.

Most elaborate gown for the races.

Airy gown for tea.

Afternoon gown for dancing.

One-piece bathing suit for the midnight dip.

PINK PALM BEACH SUIT.

The most amusing event of the last week was the race between Ben Ali Mesafee in the largest 90-horse- power machine ever seen here and the Duke Deauxee in a tiny racer, measuring five feet by three and capable of making sixty miles an hour. The Duke won by blocking the road.

The sartorial crown which has long since been the property of Andre Fouquieres has been imperilled by the daring debut at the races of Pierre Letellier, brother of Henri. Pierre appeared recently in a pink Palm Beach suit, a collarless shirt and exposing neckless limbs. Encircling his wrist was a ting platinum bracelet.

Letellier's costume drew the audible admiration of King Ferdinand of Rumania, who believes that coolness at any cost is the best slogan.

3 WOMEN SENTENCED FOR WARE "JOY" RIDE

Ware, Aug. 22.—Three men were fined and three women were given sentences in the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn as a result of an automobile party given, it was said, by Antonio Carando, Springfield business man. Carando, who was charged with driving a machine from Springfield to Ware while intoxicated, drew $110 fine and his two male companions, Gerald Healy and Arthur Birch, were fined a total of $50 for misconduct.

The three women, who told police of the ride, are Josephine Moisk, Cora Belle Barbeau and Stella Pisarczyk, all of Ware. They said they were picked up in Springfield. All were charged with misconduct.

WOMAN SAVED FROM SURF AT BRANT ROCK

Battling a high surf, Raymond Smith, a Boston photo-engraver, and two other men effected a thrilling rescue of Miss Martha Rogers of West Newbury before hundreds of onlookers at Brant Rock beach.

The Rogers woman, thirty-two years old, and considered a good swimmer, was about 150 yards from the shore when she found her strength unable to cope with the high surf running.

Smith and the two men whose names were not learned, plunged into the seething surf together, and grabbed the woman, who had sunk for the second time.

BELIEVES FRENCH WAR BRIDE WAS KIDNAPED

New York, Aug. 22. — Thomas J. Kane, war veteran and Croix de Guerre holder, today reported the disappearance of his wife, who was Antoinette La Rue, a French Red Cross worker. Kane said a char-woman at an office building where Mrs. Kane was employed as a secretary told him his wife had been kidnaped by two men in an automobile. Mrs. Kane's parents, Kane said, had never become reconciled to the match.

SAY MISHAWUM FIGURE JILTED ZELDA CROSBY

Friends of Young Scenario Writer Suicide Name Motion Picture Magnate

One of the New York motion pictures magnates who attended the famous "chicken-and - champagne" revel in Mishawum Manor in Woburn in 1917 was named in New York today in connection with the suicide of Miss Zelda Crosby, brilliant young scenario writer.

The man involved is one of the best known producers in filmland and may be criminally prosecuted.

He is declared to have first loved, then betrayed and finally jilted the pretty and ambitious scenario writer.

The woman who is said to have supplanted her is a leading actress whose name goes up in white lights over one of the big Broadway theatres.

Miss Crosby, formerly employed by a Lond Island studio, was found critically ill from self-administered poison on June 16 last. She was taken from her apartment at No. 61 Madison avenue, New York, to the Bellevue Hospital, but too late.

Facts in the unhappy love story of the girl came to light despite desperate efforts to suppress them.

It is declared that the wife while Mishawum reveller paid a woman friend of Miss Crosby $25,000 to keep her knowledge of the affair to herself, and that when the woman weakened and threatened to tell she was spirited away to a private hospital and kept virtually a prisoner.

Stephen C. Rathbun, publisher of Broadway Brevities, will tell what he knows of the sordid affair to District Attorney Swann of New York.

Several affidavits are already in the hands of the New York district attorney, it is known, and friends of the unhappy young scenario writer mean to make her betrayer suffer.

RUM RUNNERS CAUGHT AFTER BATTLE

$50,000 in Liquor Seized in Gloucester After Fight With Smugglers

Gloucester, Aug. 22.—Two arrests were made, 600 gallons of high grade St. Pierre rum and a motor launch confiscated and two "lookouts" escaped capture in a hail of bullets during a liquor smuggling raid here of international ramifications.

The Gloucester police state the seizure furnishes conclusive proof of the wholesale running of liquor between this country and Canada.

The rum was valued at more than $50,000.

The two men were arrested after the launch, loaded to the gunwales with its load of liquor brought from an unknown schooner. They gave their names as Paul Scota, 32 years old, and Alexander Chisholm, 39, both of Gloucester. After a hearing they were released in $200 bail.

Chisholm is a prominent business man of Gloucester identified with the fisheries and owner of the steamer Fabia which made an unsuccessful attempt to salvage the schooner Esperanto from the sands of Sable Island. The liquor cargo was landed at his wharf.

2 Maine Bootleggers Caught at York Beach

York Beach, Me., Aug. 22.—Chief of Police Herbert Sheriff and his special officers stretched out a dragnet for bootleggers and rum runners and landed two violators of the liquor laws. Both men were taken to the town jail, and will be arraigned before Judge Will C. Hildreth.

While the beach officials were watching the bootleggers, Sheriff Fred Marshall and his deputies were seeking the source of the generous supply of liquor which is flowing through southern Maine.

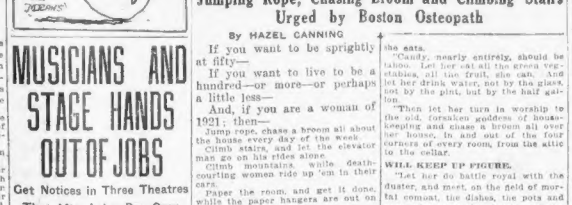
Keep Moving' Is Advice to Women Who Would Be Spry at Fifty



HOW TO BE SPRIGHTLY AT FIFTY

Some of the setting-up exercises which will keep a woman in condition so that she will be as spry at fifty as at twenty, according to Dr. Frances Graves, Boston osteopath.

Jumping Rope, Chasing Broom and Climbing Stairs Urged by Boston Osteopath

By HAZEL CANNING

If you want to be sprightly at fifty—

If you want to live to be a hundred—or more—or perhaps a little less—

And, if you are a woman of 1921; then—

Jump rope, chase a broom all about the house every day of the week.

Climb stairs, and let the elevator man go on his rides alone.

Climb mountains, while deathdefying women ride up 'em in their cars.

Paper the room, and get it done, while the paper hangers are on a strike.

Do anything, in short everything athletic and gymnastic and acrobatic, except kalsomine the ceiling. Reaching up to kalsomine the ceiling is bad for men, and very bad for women. Only do that because it has to be done. And then let the other fellow do it.

PROGRAM FOR WOMEN.

This is the advice of Dr. Frances Graves, Boston osteopath. Dr. Graves has a program for women which, according to Dr. R. Kendrick Smith, would help every woman in Boston to add at least a decade to her life. Dr. Graves' program of life for women is summed up in two acts of three words each.

The first is, "Never to say die." The second, "Keep on exercising."

Dr. Graves, safe herself in her finger tips, and exercising more each day than many a gymnast, tells a little of her program for a long life, and an agile.

"The trouble with eight women out of every ten, placidly courting old age in Boston today," she says, "is they sit down to grow old. They expect, they court, they go out more than half way, in their easy chairs and their padded automobiles, to meet old age. And when old age comes, with rheumatism, gallstones, house-confining ailments, they stretch out their arms in patient resignation and exclaim:

"'Welcome years and old age! After all, I've been expecting you ever since I passed my twentieth birthday.'"

NO NEED OF IT.

Dr. Graves shook her head in deepest reproach.

"There's no need of a woman being old and dumpy at fifty, or at sixty, or even at seventy," she said. "A woman at fifty ought to be able to jump rope with the agility of fifteen. If she has only kept on jumping rope all through the years.

"A woman at sixty should be able to walk up three flights of stairs and not puff at the top if she has exercised her heart and her lungs and her muscles all along the road to sixty, as she should.

"Now, take eating. The women who don't sit down to grow old, don't themselves old, often, in fact, generally, they do both. Women should eliminate almost all the starches, almost all the sweets, that she eats.

"Candy, nearly entirely, should be taboo. Let her eat all the fresh vegetables, all the fruit, she can. And let her drink water, not by the glass, but by the pint, but by the half gallon.

"Then let her turn in worship to the old, forsaken goddess of housekeeping and chase a broom all over her house, in and out of the four corners of every room, from the attic to the cellar.

WILL KEEP UP FIGURE.

"Let her do battle royal with the duster, and meet on the field of martial combat, the dishes, the pots and pans, the preserving kettle and the bread mixer. Let her show herself triumphant. She will keep her figure, if she does. And she'll solve the servant problem as well.

"Then let the woman all day long sit and stand tall. That is, let her try, as if it were a game, how tall she can stretch out her backbone.

"But don't forget that the diet of almost every woman, starting to get spry, should be recognized with a firm view toward agility and the slender waist line."

ONE DAY'S MENU.

As an example, Dr. Graves outlined one day's menu for a nervous woman, who does her work in an office:

BREAKFAST.
Fresh Fruit — Glass of Milk
Coarse Bran Muffin

LUNCHEON.
A chop or a salad
Potatoes or bread, but not both
Milk or lemonade

DINNER.
Thin soup — Fish
Meat only if fish is not oily and too nourishing; or salad (only if woman does not eat meat)
Ice cream or sherbet or light pudding
"Add to this," says Dr. Graves, "all the green stuff you can possibly eat. And if breakfast seems very dreary without coffee, read a magazine while eating, to make you forget."

MUSICIANS AND STAGE HANDS OUT OF JOBS

Get Notices in Three Theatres That After Labor Day Open Shop Will Be Rule

Three Boston playhouses have notified their stage employes and musicians that on and after Labor Day they will be without jobs.

Formal announcement of this, which was made last night, was confirmed today by a publicity committee of the Theatrical Stage Employes and of the Musicians' Union.

The three theatres involved are said to be the Gayety, Waldron's Casino and the Old Howard.

The formal report of the committee, which is composed of Fred Kingman and Thomas H. Finnigan of the Musicians' Union, and Fred Demsey of the Theatrical Stage Employes, was read at a meeting of the stage employes, Local No. 11, at No. 694 Washington street.

The whole matter has been laid before the Boston Central Labor Union, which has promised all possible support of the unions involved, in case of any trouble.

Some months ago the managements of the three playhouses notified employes of a wage cut. To this the workers objected and the dispute was submitted to the officials of the American and Columbia burlesque circuits in New York.

Two months ago, the union leaders allege, when the first burlesque company of the season arrived, non-union men were engaged.

Representatives of the managements are quoted as having said that in future the burlesque houses will operate entirely upon open shop lines. Union men will be employed provided they are willing to work in open shop theatres.

With the musicians the origin of the dispute is money, with the stage hands, working conditions.

MRS. OBENCHAIN WILL DEMAND FREEDOM

Accused Woman and Burch Face Court Today in Kennedy Murder Case

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 22.—A motion to quash the indictments and free Madalynne Obenchain and John G. Burch is expected to be made when the defendants are arraigned today for the slaying of J. Belton Kennedy.

The defence will argue that the State has not produced sufficient evidence to warrant the indictment and an unimpeachable alibi will be offered in behalf of Burch, according to the program outlined by Richard Kittrelle, associate attorney for the defence.

MAY ASK FOR BAIL.

The hearing is set for 10 o'clock before Judge Sidney N. Reeve in Superior Court. If he overrules the motion to quash the indictments the next move of the defence, it was said, will be to make application for bail. Bail is seldom granted where murder is charged.

Faul Schenck, noted criminal lawyer, who will direct the defence, is expected to reach Los Angeles today from Prescott, Ariz., where he has been trying a murder case.

"As soon as Mr. Schenck arrives there will be a general conference with Mr. Obenchain, former husband of Madalynne, Dr. W. A. Burch, Arthur's father and our private detectives," said Attorney Kittrelle. "Mr. Schenck is already familiar with most of the facts and I understand he has worked out a campaign. We will free both Burch and Mrs. Obenchain."

WANT TO CONFER.

The order of Attorney-General Woolwine prohibiting Mr. Burch and Mrs. Obenchain from communicating with each other worried the defense. It was hinted this might bring a court fight.

"If the sheriff and district attorney refuse to allow Arthur and Mrs. Obenchain to confer with each other, we will go into court and demand an order that will make it possible for such a meeting to be held," said Rev W. A. Burch, father of the accused man.

Attorney Kittrelle said inasmuch as a joint defense is planned it will be necessary for all parties to confer.

In the meantime the operatives for the defense continued to pry into the past life of Kennedy. That the dead man had many love affairs has been fully established. Evidence will be produced, it is promised, to show he might have been slain through jealousy.

CALLS IN VAIN ON TWO HUSBANDS TO BAIL HER

Mrs. Blanche LaRue Malloy Priest Found Guilty of Bigamy

Mrs. Blanche LaRue Malloy-Priest was found guilty of bigamy by Judge Abbott in Waltham Court today and held for the Grand Jury. Failing to furnish $1,000 in bail, she was remanded to Cambridge Jail, pending trial.

Weeping copiously and wringing her hands, Mrs. Priest pleaded guilty and when Judge Abbott set the bail she turned to her two husbands and asked them to furnish it for her.

Edward Malloy of No. 29 Weston street, Roxbury, whom she married eight years ago, was seated beside husband No. 2, Arthur J. Priest of No. 73 Waltham street, Watertown, whom she met last July 16 and married on July 30.

They told the court they were "through with her" and declined to arrange for her freedom pending trial.

She appealed to Priest and he turned her down, and then turning to Malloy she sought help, but he said he had saved her from jail several years ago when her home was raided, and he wanted no more to do with her.

While the woman was led out of the courtroom under guard and taken to Cambridge jail both husbands left the court and boarded the same street car for their homes.

Priest and his wife met Malloy in the market district of Boston on Saturday night. Malloy claimed her as his wife and had her arrested.

CONSTABULARY GUARDS JAIL AT BARNSTABLE

Militia Relieved From Duty Where 3 Accused Bravas Are Detained

Barnstable, Aug. 22.—Nine members of the Massachusetts State constabulary, armed with 38-calibre revolvers, 12-gauge riot guns and police sticks, today were patrolling the walls of Barnstable Jail to prevent any attempt to rescue the three Portuguese charged with assault upon Miss Gertrude Butler.

Supplementing the constabulary were seven guards and the Jail officials.

Although feeling of the townspeople still runs high over the attack on Miss Butler, a quieter tone than that of last week marked the discussions of the affair here and in nearby Cape towns. Sheriff Irving B. Rosenthal when asked as to whether trouble was anticipated, said:

"I am unable to say whether we expect trouble or not. We are well prepared for anything, however. With the constabulary on duty and our extra guards, we are prepared to cope with any emergency."

The constabulary replaced the twenty-four members of the 102d Field Artillery, who returned to Camp Devens. Although the militia is needed at hand, it was stated by officials that it was unlikely it would be called upon again.

Members of the constabulary have quarters in the courthouse which adjoins the jail and have established a mess there.

Three weeks of their stay in Barnstable is indefinite, but it is certain that they will remain until after the hearing of John Diaz, Benjamin Gomez and Joseph Andreas, the accused men, on Monday, August 29. About Barnstable today it was reported that the townspeople may ask for an additional force on that date, but none of the officials would confirm such reports.

FLOWERS SENT TO SEA FOR LOST FISHERMEN

Gloucester, Aug. 22—Impressive memorial services for men lost at sea were held Sunday afternoon in Blynman avenue, when thousands of citizens gathered at the bridge to pay homage to those who went down in the deep.

Beautiful bouquets of flowers, silent tributes to the departed fishermen, were cast into the swiftly moving waters of the Annisquam River and borne seaward by the tide, drifting in and around the fleet of destroyers and small craft anchored in the harbor.

How to Beautify a Summer Soiled Face

It's really a simple matter to renovate a face soiled by sun, winds or dirt. Ordinary mercolized wax, used like cold cream, will transform the worst complexion into one of snowy whiteness and velvety softness. It literally peels off the outer veil of surface skin, but so gently, gradually, there's no discomfort. The wornout skin comes off not in patches, but evenly, in tiny particles, leaving no evidence of the treatment. The younger, healthier underskin forming the new complexion is one of captivating loveliness. One ounce of mercolized wax, to be had at any druggists, is enough to remove any tanned, reddened, simulated, freckled or blotchy skin. Apply before retiring, wash-ing in morning.

Many skins wrinkle easily with every wind that blows with heat. Wrote etc., to collect wrinkle remover, because it tightens the skin and structures relaxed tissues. A wash lotion made as follows: Powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel one-half pint. This gives immediate results. —Advertisement.

Eyes Sore?

If your eyes or lids are sore; if they itch, burn or feel dry; if your vision is blurred, your eyesight dim; if you are obliged to wear glasses, go to your druggist and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one in a fourth of a glass of water and bathe the eyes from two to four times a day. Sound, comfortable eyes and improved eyesight will make the world look brighter.

Note: Doctors say Bon-Opto strengthens eyesight 50% in a week's time in many instances.

SUMMONSES FOR 150 LIGHT LAW VIOLATORS

Goodwin Starts Roundup of Auto Drivers—Face Loss of Licenses

Summonses for 150 auto drivers who have neglected to comply with the new headlight law were issued today by State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin in the first round-up of the alleged law violators.

According to the reports of highway inspectors, these alleged offenders have made no effort to comply with the law and will probably lose their drivers' licenses.

"This law is framed for the safety of the public and it is going to be enforced," said Goodwin.

"In addition to those who have made no attempt to comply with the law, our inspectors have reported a number of cases where lights are improperly focused. Unless these are adjusted properly at once, these drivers, too, will run the risk of losing their licenses."

SOCIETY HAPPENINGS OF GREATER BOSTON

Interest in Coming Costume Ball at Gloucester

By BETTY ALDEN

North Shore summer residents are looking forward with much interest to a series of activities, both social and charitable, which are to take place in the near future.

Probably the most interest is being manifested in the costume ball to be held at the Hawthorne Inn, at Gloucester, next Friday evening, in aid of Dr. Grenfell's Labrador Mission. All the young people on the North Shore, it seems, are enthusiastic, and many are engaged in selling tickets.

Another costume ball will be held at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, the night of Saturday, August 27, at which there will be continuous dancing, beginning at 9 o'clock, for those in costume. After 10:30 all the guests will be permitted to dance when the spirit moves and will probably be available.

A number of well known people have planned two special performances of moving pictures at Manchester-by-the-Sea, under the North Shore Horticultural Society. These will take place Tuesday, August 23 and Saturday, August 27. The committee in charge consists of Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Mrs. Everett Morss, Mrs. George E. Cabot, Mrs. Lester Leland and Mrs. T. Jenkins Hare. Mrs. Russell S. Codman, president of the society.

An entertainment in behalf of devastated France will be given at North Beverly, Tuesday, August 30, at the Seaside Chapel. It will be in the form of moving pictures of interest, loaned by Mrs. Everett Morss, who spent some time in France, and Mrs. Osgood Van Brunt, who plans to explain the pictures. While at North Scituate they will be entertained by Mrs. Frederick Colgate, who has charge of the entertainment.

A wedding of much interest to Bostonians will occur Saturday, August 27, when Miss Rosanna D. Allen Reynolds will become the bride of Anson Howe Smith of Dedham. The ceremony will be performed at "Treasure Island Farm," the Summer home at Marshfield of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Corcoran Reynolds of No. 185 Bay State road, Boston. It will occur at 4:30 p. m. and will be followed by a reception for which four hundred or more invitations have been sent out.

A large number of notables attended the meeting in aid of the Near East relief, which was held at the Beverly Farms Church yesterday afternoon. Augustus P. Loring of Hyde Crossing presided and the speakers were the Rev. P. N. Rhinelander, Bishop of Pennsylvania; Professor Ellis Ames Ballard, of the American College at Beirut, Syria, and Harutun Effendjian of Turkey. Among the sponsors for the meeting were Governor Cox, Senator Lodge, Bishop William Lawrence, the Misses Shurtleff, Cardinal O'Connell, Mrs. Henry W. Peabody and Dr. Charles Wadsworth.

Practically all the younger yachtsmen and women along the North Shore are entered for the junior races of Marblehead for cups presented by H. M. Sears, according to Caleb Loring, who is receiving the entries. The races start August 29.

Miss Margaret Curtis of Manchester has just returned from Poland, where she has been doing Red Cross work for four months. She is a former holder of the women's national golf championship title.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Katherine Bradley and George Avery White of Worcester, to take place Tuesday, September 6, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Erving Bradley, No. 7 Military road.

Miss Randolph P. Forbes of Boston, daughter of Colonel Edward M. Howe is at the Greylock Hotel, at Williamstown.

Miss Esther Hurd of Boston and Miss Muriel Radcliffe of Beverly are among the local people taking part in the gazettes at Newport.

Rumors are heard of the approaching announcement of the engagement of Miss Symphorosa Bristed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed of "Talkfield," Lenox, to Charles G. Shaw of New York.

Verdun, France, Aug. 22—Members of the American Legion today in City Hall here dedicated a tablet to the defenders of Verdun. The ceremony was carried out in the presence of city officials. The tablet was removed to the men who during the terrific German onslaught of February and March, 1916, stood at Verdun and held back the enemy.

The tablet bears an inscription stating it was dedicated to the men who "suffered the immortal words, 'They shall not pass.'" At the end of the ceremony four of the Americans were decorated by the municipality with the special medal of Verdun.

BLIND WOMAN'S WEDDING AT 76 STIRS PROBE

Youthful Husband Called Upon by Registrar to Explain Age in Application

A marriage between a blind woman past seventy-six years and a man of thirty-five, has caused Edward W. McGlenen, registrar of births and marriages, to institute an investigation.

The aged bride is Juana Fernandes Gomez and her young husband is Silvestre Lopez of No. 17 Battery street. She was married three times in Spain.

Madam Lopez has been in this country less than six months. Lopez has been here for several years.

Mr. McGlenen's attention was drawn to the marriage by the Boston American, which last week received from residents of the Spanish colony presents against the marriage, which took place last Friday, Justice of the Peace Carlo Arzillo of No. 23 Battery street, having performed the ceremony.

Mr. McGlellan today announced that his investigation had not been completed and that he had not decided what to do. He says that last February Mrs. Maria Fragola of No. 17 Battery street asked the immigration authorities for permission to bring to Boston her aged step-mother, Senora Gomez-Popez. The old woman at that time was living in Ferrol, Spain.

Today Lopez was summoned to the Registrar's office to explain how it was that the age of his bride as given on his application for a marriage permit and the actual facts of her age are widely pondered. The application says that Senora Lopez is only fifty. She is seventy-six, it is claimed.

Lopez explained that the application was made out by a clerk in a grocery store and that he merely had affixed his mark, without reading the document.

PROF. EINSTEIN SINGS PRAISES OF AMERICA

Misquoted as to Attitude Toward Scientists Here, He Explains

By International News Service.

Berlin, Aug. 22.—American scientists lead in the fields of astronomy and experimental mineralogy as well as in certain branches of experimental physics," is the opinion of Professor Albert Einstein, known as the father of the doctrine of relativity.

"Optimism, energy and ambition are the qualities of the American scientist which are bringing him to the fore," said Dr. Einstein. "Furthermore, the American is free from the spirit of skepticism so predominant in Europe."

Professor Einstein received the correspondent in the library of his Berlin apartment at No. 5 Haberland strasse.

"I want to take this occasion to tell America how thankful I am for the hearty support both in scientific and in official circles, and the charming hospitality extended to me on my recent trip to America," said the discoverer of the theory of relativity.

"Of course I cannot be held responsible for statements, which appeared in the Rotterdam Courant and the Berliner Tageblatt. They put words into my mouth which I never uttered. They made me criticise where there was no criticism. It was very regretable."

MANSFIELD PROTESTS NEW PASSENGER RATE

Residents of Mansfield are protesting the new passenger rate regulations which go into effect Sept 1. They are particularly averse to the rule which compels them to buy twenty-five ride tickets to Boston and to use them within three months. They say other communities on the same line are equally opposed. Mr. P. S. Grout of Mansfield declares the requirement that the twenty-five-ride tickets, costing $18.50, be used up within three months, is a hardship. Many Mansfield people are not really commuters and only come to Boston occasionally.

NEW YORK STILL 'WETTEST' SPOT ON DRY MAP

Italian "Whiskey" Ring Behind Bootlegging on Vast Scale. Prices High

(This is the seventh of a series of special articles exposing the gigantic nation-wide operations of the booze legging "ring." It will be followed by three others based on personal investigation and official information from government agents.)

By W. S. SEABROOK.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Aug. 22.—Three reasons combine, one is almost daily raids, arrests and seizures by Federal agents and city police, to keep Greater New York the "wettest" spot on the whole Volstead map.

First, obviously, is the city's immense population, a part, among whom racial tradition and habit are utterly opposed to prohibition.

Second, New York's intimate contact, as a great port, with non-prohibition countries where liquor is easily obtainable?

Third, the fact that New York is the "playground" of all America, and that thousands of those who advocate law enforcement at home come here to frolic with John Barleycorn? New York is the bootlegging centre of the United States for the same reason that it is the centre of the financial, musical centre and the insurance centre.

The biggest single enemy group the enforcement agents are in contact with is a powerful, secret "Italian whiskey ring," which has secured practical control and domination of the wholesale liquor business.

This "Italian whiskey ring" is not a myth, but a fact of detective story imagination. It actually exists, and is perhaps the most powerful of all the bootlegging "rings" in America. It dominates particularly the crooked element among wholesale liquor dealers who are still operating under the famous "B Permits."

BOOTLEG ON HUGE SCALE.

These dealers, who have thousands of barrels of whiskey, alcohol and wine in bonded warehouses and also around New York, are still permitted by law to sell to drugstores, hospitals, manufacturers and perfumery manufacturers. Some of them operate within the law. But many use these permits as a screen for the sale of their wares through bootlegging channels on a gigantic scale.

Agents check up the bonded warehouse stock of a certain wholesale dealer whose permit expires. They find fifty barrels of alcohol are gone. The wholesaler, however, produces withdrawal permits which had been presented to him by the people to whom he sold the alcohol—for cash. These permits are in the name of a legitimate-sounding drug concern. They have the government stamp, the signatures of Federal officials, even the watermark of the treasury department paper.

But when the agents scrutinize these permits, they prove to be clever but blatant forgeries.

"Oh, how surprised and shocked I am," says the wholesale dealer. "Who'd have thought it? What wicked people! How they fooled me! Of course, you can't blame me. And I will gladly lend every assistance to help catch them and bring them to justice."

The Federal agents know they are being fooled by the wholesaler, but they can't touch him.

The names and addresses on the permits were all faked, and the alcohol itself has been moved by trucks to the fake, forged and false drug-store cellars, and New York is full of them.

The liquor goes into the cellars as crude alcohol. A few days later it comes out magically transformed. Wooden cases, stencils, bottles with names blown into the glass, lithographed labels, corks, seals, printed cautions against refilling, impressive assurances that the genuine is always sealed with the government stamp"—and the whole business is faked, forged and false.

Out goes the liquor to the unsuspecting public, retailed by an army of petty bootleggers. It is circulated in suit-cases, satchels, hip-pockets, walking-sticks, golf bags, guitar cases, tool kits—anything to divert suspicion. Belt lines, store clerks, taxi drivers, fruit vendors, moving men, salesmen for anything from soap-to steel rails—under a thousand different disguises, operate all over Greater New York.

The imitation is so realistic that only experts can tell from appearance or taste that it isn't real. Crude alcohol and colored water—yet it sells from $5 to $15 a quart.

FEW SALOONS VIOLATE THE LAW.

The bulk of the violations in Greater New York today are the sale of bottled goods. It isn't nearly so easy as it used to be to buy a single drink. Through the combined activities of federal agents and city police, there is practically no drinking by saloons and restaurants than there was six months ago.

The dives are closed when it was possible for a stranger to enter almost any saloon or restaurant and get it with a whispered word or a wink.

Throughout the whole of the "White Light" district of Broadway and around the "Roaring Forties," there are not a dozen places openly engaged in dispensing "drinks" indiscriminately to the general public.

On the other hand, there probably isn't a single hotel—and there's a city block—in the whole of Greater New York where the stranger, if he is "wise," cannot purchase liquor on the hip."

Prohibition enforcement in New York (both city and State) is now in the hands of Judge H. L. Hart, director of the Federal Bureau. For seven years he was judge of the city court in Binghamton where he made such a record for law enforcement that when he last stood for re-election he was endorsed by Republicans, Democrats and prohibitionists alike.

He proposes to put the Permit B wholesale sets out of business. Under the law, they have the right to dispose of their present stock. But it is believed that stock will be exhausted within five months. They are to get no more stock, and when what they now have is exhausted, their permits will be revoked. Importers, operating under B permits, will be handled in the same way.

Then only wholesale druggists, retail druggists and manufacturers will be allowed to withdraw whisky or alcohol from government control. All of these houses will be carefully inspected with the active co-operation of committees from the legitimate wholesale druggists, retail druggists and manufacturers. By this means the crooked ones will be exposed and put out of business.

The next article will describe conditions in Chicago, where the saloons are running wide open.

A GENTLE WAY TO END CORNS

The Modern Method, Scientific, Easy, Quick and Sure

The old corn enders were harsh, crude and uncertain. They came into disrepute.

Then a world-famed laboratory created a new method, and millions have adopted it.

The new way is Blue-jay—liquid or plaster. One applies it by a touch. The pain stops instantly, and soon the whole corn loosens and comes out.

To pare a corn and keep it now is folly. Stop it the moment it appears. Remove it in this gentle way.

Watch one corn go when Blue-jay is applied. You will let it deal with all corns after that.

Send to the drug store now.

AUTO JUST GRAZES FALLEN CYCLIST

While driving toward Hough's Neck, on Sea street, yesterday, Charles W. Bears of No. 120 Austin street, Worcester, saw Harry Greenburg, fifteen years old, of No. 21 Chestnut street, Roxbury, fall off his bicycle in the path of the auto.

Applying his brakes, he gave the signal to cars in the rear that he was about to stop and brought his car to a halt with his front wheel just grazing the boy.

An auto which was following crashed into the rear end of Bears' auto, damaging the mudguard, but not injuring occupants of either machine.

YOUNGEST CUNEO ORPHAN AND HIS SMILE

HENRY CUNEO

Editor Boston American: Having two children of my own, I can fully appreciate Mrs. Cuneo's position, and have lost several nights' sleep thinking about it. I held their baby in my arms today and succeeded in making him smile; no one in that large family has smiled for some time, and I know the little fellow almost forgot how. I submit to your good paper a photo I made while that smile lasted, knowing every one loves a picture of a baby smiling.—Alfred Oyer Hohen.

TWO BACK BAY CHILDREN AID CUNEO FUND

lice Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis tells their story. It read:

"107 Jersey st.,
"Boston, Mass.

"Mr. Edwin U. Curtis,
"Police Commissioner,
"Boston, Mass.

"Dear Mr. Curtis:

"My sister and I have just read of your call for funds in aid of the family of Patrolman Andrew B. Cuneo, who was shot last Saturday.

"We are sending you one dollar, which is our movie money for this week, and we trust it will be the beginning of a movement among the children of the city of Boston to sacrifice a few cents in aid of this police officer's family.

"Our mother taught us from the time we were very small that the policeman is our best friend. We have never forgotten that, and feel that every child should have a kindly interest for this family of a police officer who lost his life while on duty.

"With this letter goes our best wishes to the family, and a hope that every soon the mother will be provided with enough funds to keep her children together and assure them of an education.

"We also wish to thank you for your letter to the public seeking aid for the Cuneo family.

"Very truly yours,
"Norma and Georgia Erd."

(Aged fourteen and thirteen.)

BOXING PANS CONTRIBUTE.

The Boston American Cuneo Fund today totalled $7,961.07 as approved by an auditor, exclusive of collections taken at the Commercial A. C. bouts at Mechanics Building and at Braves Field Saturday afternoon. This money will be counted in for tomorrow's list. Daily contributions last week averaged better than $1,100. It is planned to buy the Cuneo home and to provide annuities that will insure the widow and her children against want.

If you wish to combine charity with pleasure attend tonight's performance of "A Wise Child" at the Tremont Theatre. The entire receipts are to be devoted by Charles Dillingham, producer of the show, and the theatre management, to the Boston American Cuneo Fund. Vivienne Segal, the brilliant young star, suggested it and she and every member of the cast is eager for a record attendance in order to swell the fund.

"A Wise Child" is a comedy by Rida Johnson Young. Critics have pronounced it unusually clever and have given high praise to Miss Segal and others in the company.

Robert McWade, as the father, gives a sterling performance. Douglas Stevenson, popular for his many appearances in leading musical comedies, has a most pleasing role, and Charles Abbe, the old Boston Museum player, gives the finest of character performances as the family butler. Others in the cast are Wright Kramer, Walter Regan, Iska Murff, Sara Enright, Dorothy Leeds, William Ingersoll and B. N. Lewin.

COMMITTEE ACTIVE.

Police Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis, in spite of his multiple duties, has been one of the most active members of the Boston American Cuneo Fund Committee. He receives generous contributions daily from the public and forwards them to the Fund Editor as rapidly as he receives them.

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, Allen R. Fr. derick and A. A. Badaracco are devoting their entire time to the cause. They are busy day and night making personal collections and addressing meetings. Mr. Badaracco personally collected $323 in five hours and 95 per cent. of it came from firms and individuals on Canal street, where he has his place of business.

Louis Cornetta, who used part of his lunch hour to call at the Boston American and donate $2 today, made an appeal to all brother barbers in Greater Boston to aid the Cuneo Fund. Cornetta said the barbers ought to show what they can do.

Joseph L. Ansino of the Merrick Candy Company, West Springfield, in forwarding a check for $2, wrote: "I know it is a very small amount, but I figure that every little helps. That is the spirit to show. A. Garfield Davis of the Old South Building of this city sends $5, wrote: "Trusting the fund will swell to a very satisfactory amount, and appreciating your good efforts in the matter, I am, etc."

Here is another example of newsboy generosity, which speaks for itself:

"Editor Boston American Cuneo Fund:

"Dear Sir—Kindly acknowledge through your paper this little sum of money ($2.14), and I wish it was more, for the man who filled his position nobly and courageously to the last. It will take a little time before his family can step out to shoulder the task he left off, so let's all help.

"TOMMY FLANAGAN,
"City Hall Annex Newsboy."

Checks should be made out to the Boston American Cuneo Fund in order to avoid confusion. Charles Winship Smith sent a check for $2.50 made payable to Mrs. Andrew B. Cuneo. As this could only be cashed by her it will have to be forwarded and therefore cannot be added to the auditor's list as there will be no cash to show for it. It is for this reason that all checks should be made out to the general fund.

It is my earnest and confident hope that this conference, approached as it will be by all concerned in a spirit of courage, friendliness and candid understanding, may achieve far-reaching results that will be conducive to the prosperity and peace of the world."

$600 RAISED FOR CUNEOS AT OPEN AIR MEETING

A sum in excess of $600 was realized for the Boston American Fund for the benefit of the widow and nine children of Patrolman Andrew B. Cuneo, slain in the performance of his duty, at an open air service conducted by the Volunteers of Salvation in Pemberton square Sunday night. Nearly 2,000 persons at the service sent showers after showers of coins upon the big drum when the official call for contributions was put forth.

Colonel and Mrs. Walter Duncan, New England commanders of the Volunteers, directed the open air service. Miss Frances Tait of Paragon Park delighted with vocal solos.

Among the speakers were Allen R. Frederick, chairman of the Cuneo Relief Committee; Andrew Badaracco, Representative Paul Hines, John J. Murphy of South Boston and School Committeeman Charles S. O'Connor.

EASTHAMPTON GAS AND LIGHT RATES PROTESTED

Protesting against the rates charged for both gas and electricity by the Eastern Gas and Light Co., "unjust and excessive," more than 200 consumers today appealed to the State Department of Public Utilities to force down prices. The consumers complained that they are compelled to pay at the rate of $2.50 per 1,000 cubic feet for gas and for electricity 12.5 cents per kilowatt hour.

$5,000 GIVEN IN LYNN FOR JEWISH RELIEF

More than $5,000 was subscribed for the Lynn Distribution Committee, to be used in Jewish welfare work in Europe, at a meeting held in Lynn, under the auspices of the United Charities of Lynn. Abraham Alpert, editor of the Boston Jewish American, was the principal speaker.

FOUR DAYS LEFT TO ENTER FOR BIG SWIM

Boston American's Carnival Will Have Charles Toth as Added Attraction

Charlie Toth, the I. street bath "brownie" who swam from Charlestown bridge to Boston Light a week ago during a storm, will give a special exhibition in Charles River Basin next Saturday afternoon in connection with the Boston American Girls' Swimming Race, open to all New England mermaids.

Toth is one of the sturdiest swimmers in the United States and may be the English channel swim next season. During his recent battle against the waves to Boston Light he covered twelve miles without getting out of the water.

EXHIBITION SWIM.

The 100.00 or more spectators who will line the Charles River Esplanade next Saturday will all have a chance to see this great swimmer perform. He will swim from the stake boat anchored near Harvard bridge to the raft near the Union Boat Club. This fine extra attraction will be well worth witnessing.

Only four more days remain for the girls of New England to enter the swimming contest for which five excellent prizes are offered. Entries close next Friday at noon. Girls who intend to participate in the big swim should mail their entries at once. As a number is to be assigned each girl so that the spectators may know who she is, it is necessary to place a time limit upon entries. So get busy, girls. Enter NOW. You still have a good time anyway and perhaps you will win a prize.

50 LIFEGUARDS.

Among the thirty lifeguards who will patrol the course during the contest to take any swimmers from the water if they become exhausted are Joseph J. Canty and William T. Long, Jr., the city life savers who made a thrilling rescue of two children at Ruthsford Island a few days ago. All the life guards at the Boston American swim will be under the direction of John J. Moffit of Flaherty, the widely known Revere Beach life saver.

The girls who compete in the American carnival will be perfectly safe from the minute they dive into the stream until they reach the destination after swimming 1½ miles down river. They will be given every needed attention both before and after the race. Capable matrons will look after their dressing tent and physicians, nurses and numerous attendants will be present to assist.

BOSTON QUARANTINED AGAINST CORN BORER

In a radical crusade to check the enormous losses caused by the corn borer, the State Department of Agriculture today announced that orders had been issued against the transfer of corn and corn products from 136 Massachusetts cities and towns.

Boston heads the list of quarantined municipalities. The quarantine forbids the shipment of any corn out of any of the restricted places, but permits the sale of the corn within the restricted areas.

HIGH PRICES ARE HERE TO STAY, SAYS EXPERT

W. Jett Lauck Declares Costs Are Already Moving Steadily Upward

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 22.—High prices are here to stay!

W. Jett Lauck, one of the leading economists of the country, made this statement today. The good old days when Mr. Dooliman Citizen's income could meet living costs without strengthening the imagination or straining the pocketbook are gone, never to return, he declared.

A return to normalcy means a return to the conditions of 1919-1920, not to 1913-1914, according to the economist.

"To expect a return of the prices and conditions of pre-war years is due merely the blindness of mind is always looking into the past for the golden age," he said.

According to present indications, prices have reached their lowest level and are now moving upwards, the economist continued.

"There can be no doubt that prices are now advancing," he said. "Moreover, when fundamental industrial conditions are examined, it is perfectly clear that such advances are inevitable. The price of an article is the combined result of actual production costs—in which labor is the chief item—and the profits of the producer, wholesaler and retailer and others through which it passes before reaching the consumer. During the war profits were excessive and profiteering ran rampant. Some improvements have taken place, and much greater improvements could take place. But the cold, hard fact is that no important scaling down of profits is to be anticipated in the near future."

KILLS WOMAN AT HUSBAND'S SIDE WHEN SPURNED

Californian Exacts Grim Revenge When His Love is Rejected by Mormon

By Associated Press

Porterville, Cal., Aug. 22.—Mrs. J. H. Bachman, forced to choose between her husband and another man in the presence of both, elected to remain true to her marriage vows, and thus sealed her death, which came an instant later when the other man, Walter H. Alexander, it is charged, shot and killed her yesterday.

"Well, what are you going to do?" Alexander is quoted as demanding of Mrs. Bachman.

"I guess I'll stay here," Bachman said his wife replied from her seat beside him in an automobile.

Thereupon, Bachman alleges, Alexander fired a shotgun pointblank at the woman.

The shooting occurred at the ranch home of W. B. Collings, stepfather of Alexander, in the Poplar district, near here. Alexander's mother and stepfather also witnessed the shooting. After the shooting Alexander left, carrying the shotgun, it was said, and a sheriff's posse is searching for him.

CHILD IS INJURED AS AUTOS CRASH

An auto truck operated by Henry Hildebrand of No. 39 Oak street, Somerville, while turning from Cooper into Endicott street, North End, crashed into a touring car owned by Benjamin Small of No. 493 Ferry street, Everett, and operated by his brother, Israel, of No. 515 Cross street, Malden. Small's machine ran into Nunzio DeGradelo, seven years old, of No. 88 Endicott street, who was playing near the curb.

Nunzio was taken to the Relief Hospital with contusions of the hands and legs.

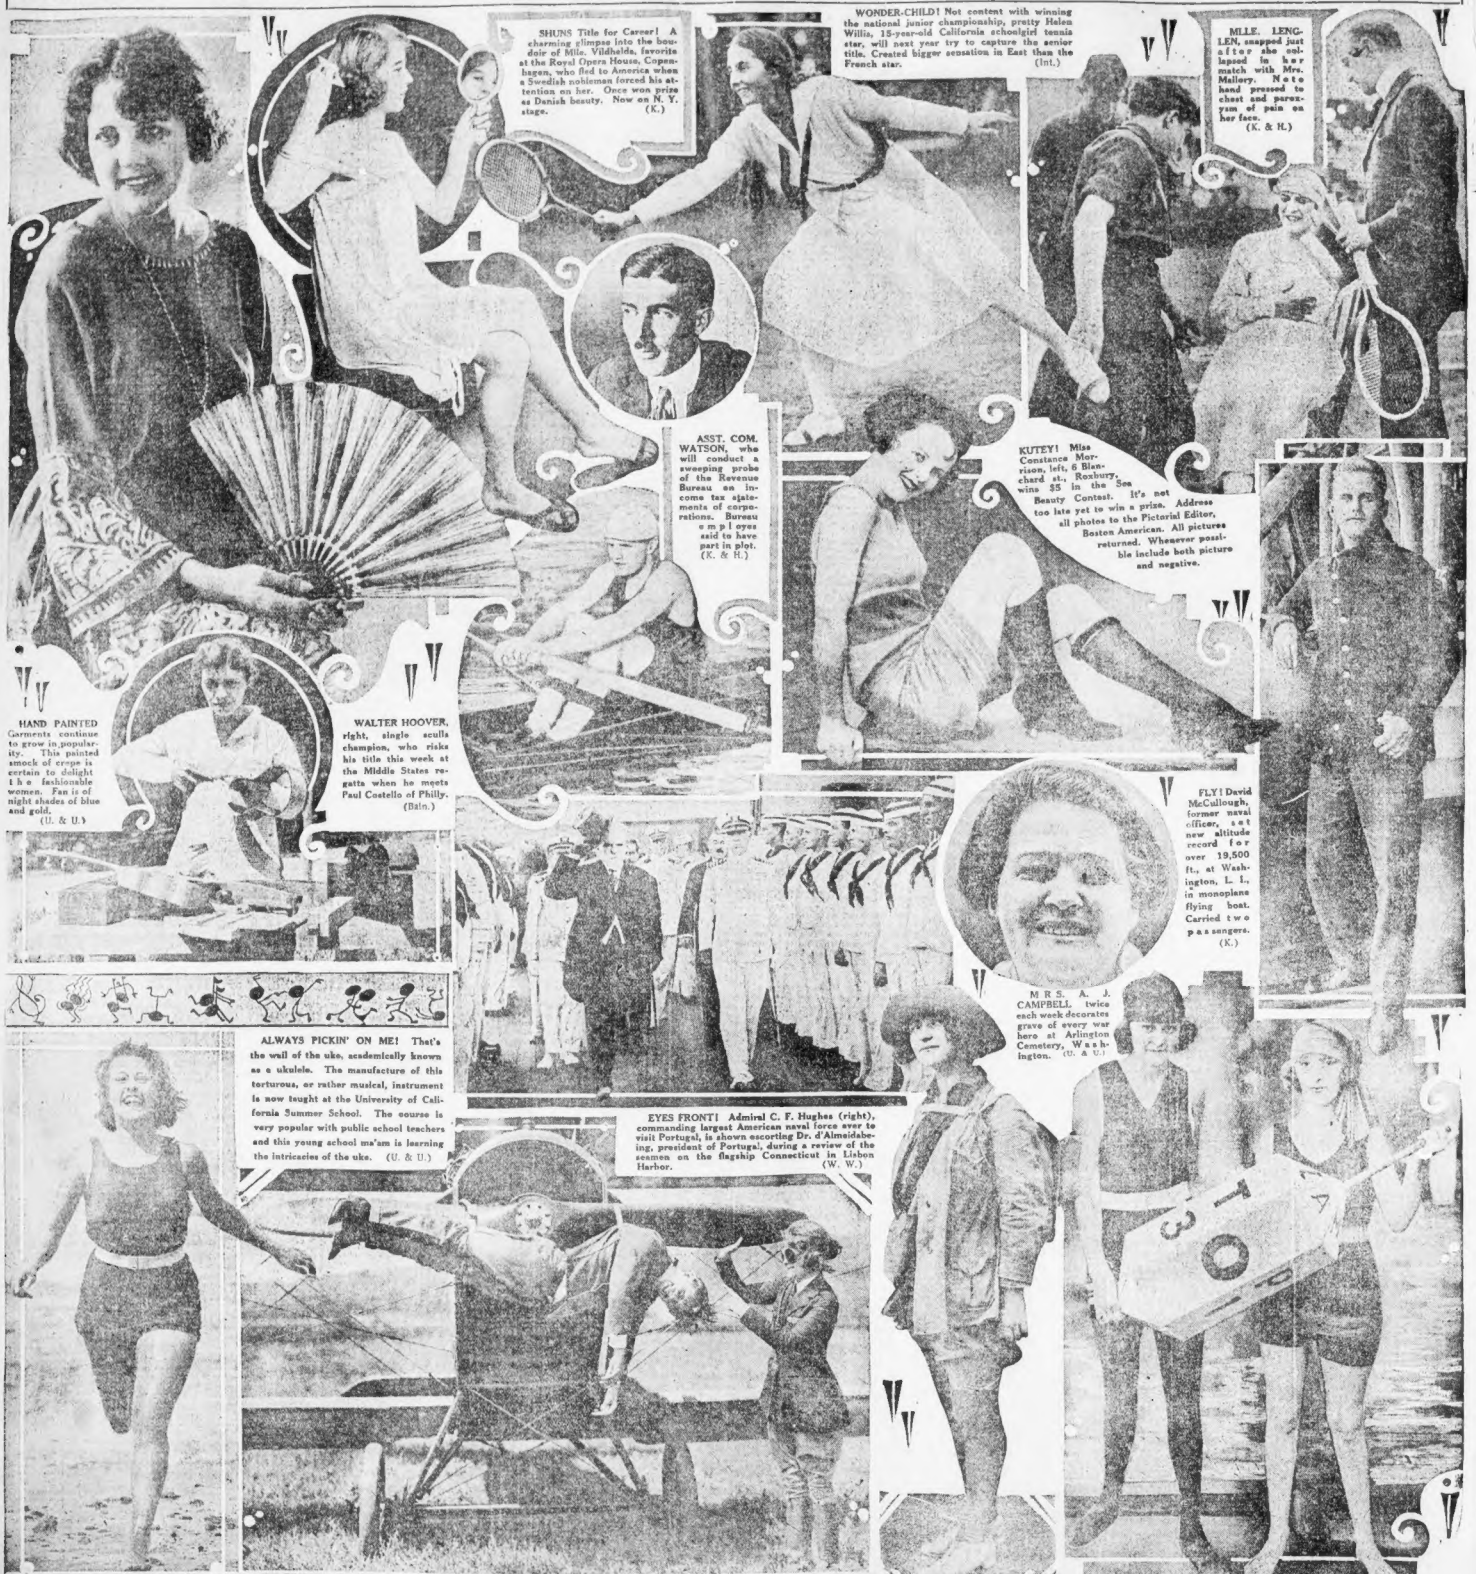
DANISH BEAUTY FLEES TO AMERICA TO ESCAPE TITLED WOOER



SHUNS Title for Career! A charming glimpse into the boudoir of Mlle. Vildhelds, favorite at the Royal Opera House, Copenhagen, who fled to America when a Swedish nobleman forced his attention on her. Once won prize as Danish beauty. Now on N. Y. stage. (K.)

WONDER-CHILD! Not content with winning the national junior championship, pretty Helen Willis, 15-year-old California schoolgirl tennis star, will next year try to capture the senior title. Created bigger sensation in East than the French star. (Int.)

MLLE. LENGLEN, snapped just after she collapsed in her match with Mrs. Mallory. Note hand pressed to chest and paroxysm of pain on her face. (K. & H.)

ASST. COM. WATSON, who will conduct a sweeping probe of the Revenue Bureau on income tax ajstements of corperations. Bureau employees said to have part in plot. (K. & H.)

KUTEY! Miss Constance Morrison, left, 6 Blanchard st., Roxbury, wins $5 in the Sea Beauty Contest. It's not too late yet to win a prize. Address all photos to the Pictorial Editor, Boston American. All pictures returned. Whenever possible include both picture and negative.

HAND PAINTED Garments continue to grow in popularity. This painted smock of crepe is certain to delight the fashionable women. Fan is of night shades of blue and gold. (U. & U.)

WALTER HOOVER, right, single sculls champion, who risks his title this week at the Middle States regatta when he meets Paul Costello of Philly. (Bain.)

FLY! David McCullough, former naval officer, set new altitude record for over 19,500 ft., at Washington, L. I., in monoplane flying boat. Carried two passengers. (K.)

MRS. A. J. CAMPBELL, twice each week decorates grave of every war hero at Arlington Cemetery, Washington. (U. & U.)

ALWAYS PICKIN' ON ME! That's the wail of the uke, academically known as a ukulele. The manufacture of this torturous, or rather musical, instrument is now taught at the University of California Summer School. The course is very popular with public school teachers and this young school ma'am is learning the intricacies of the uke. (U. & U.)

EYES FRONT! Admiral C. F. Hughes (right), commanding largest American naval force ever to visit Portugal, is shown escorting Dr. d'Almeidabeing, president of Portugal, during a review of the seamen on the flagship Connecticut in Lisbon Harbor. (W. W.)

TEN SECONDS IN NOTHING! Miss Molly Smith, Paragon Park favorite, believes sprinting on the beach at Nantasket is a wonderful beautifier. Snapped on the home stretch. She says the one-piece suit is ideal for running.

NOW, WILL YOU BE GOOD? Minnehaha, the "masked marvel" (wearing the goggles), who fears neither death nor publicity, which proves that she is a daredevil, is showing how to tame a husband. Minnehaha isn't married, but then one doesn't know what minute one will get one, so she is practicing methods of discipline. Strap hubby to the propeller and take him aloft for a cupla miles or so—then he won't get sassy, she says. No, he won't do much of anything after that. The "victim" is Mars St. Clair, a daredevil pilot. Minnie (excuse the familiarity) just rambles all ave. a plene when it's hitting a fast clip. Minnie, it is whispered, is very easy to look at when not disguised. (U. & U.)

HEDWIG Y. LOSCH, 19-year-old Johns Hopkins co-ed, who is hiking from Baltimore to San Francisco, just won't face powder on her trip—no matter how mean the dust gets. Isn't she brave, girls? (Bain.)

TODDLE ALONG, GIRLIES! And that's just what they are doing nowadays, even to taking their toddle togs in swimming with them. Here are the two girls who originated the idea of the water top, Belle Buchanan and Peggy Hoffman. They put the novelty into use at the water carnival of the Alamac A. A., Lake Hopatcong, N. J. Other resorts took up the fad. (W. W.)

FRIENDS RALLY TO SUPPORT OF SHANLEY

Veteran, Whose Case Mystifies Doctors, Declares Arrest Is an "Outrage"

Friends of Harry Shanley, World War veteran and holder of the Victoria Cross for valor, who has mystified the medical profession of the country for some time past by his ability to pass objects through his head, rallied to his support when the news of his arrest was published.

Shanley was held for the New York police upon word from that city that he was wanted for alleged grand larceny of wearing apparel. He presented a pathetic figure at the City Prison where his fifteen-year-old wife carrying her eighteen months' old baby embraced him and wept at her husband's predicament.

He was admitted to bail plainly showing the effects of his incarceration.

IN PITIABLE CONDITION.

Accompanied by Dr. J. Lee Hanson of the Massachusetts Clinic for Diagnosis, under whose care the strange victim of the war has been since his arrival in Boston, Shanley left the jail in a pitiable condition.

According to Dr. Hanson, the arrest of Shanley brought back a recurrence of shell-shock and sedatives were necessary to quiet the nerves of the shattered veteran.

Shanley protests that his arrest is an outrage. He offers as proof that he has been registered at the Richwood Hotel since July 3 and has never left Boston in the intervening period. The charge against him in New York specifies that the alleged larceny took place on July 10.

NO MENTION OF WOUNDS.

The description of the wanted man, as wired from New York, also fails to tally with Shanley's in several details, Dr. Hanson asserted, and no mention was made of Shanley's peculiar wounds.

The veteran believes he is being persecuted by someone. He claims to have received a threatening letter from a detective agency shortly after his arrival in Boston, which demanded $15 on penalty of "putting him in jail."

Another instance of the alleged persecution, he says, came in the form of a milk bill for $2.50 from a large local concern. He denied ever ordering or receiving the milk and believes his name is being used by someone who read accounts of his wounds.

When Shanley's case comes up in the Municipal Court today he is determined to fight it. Driscoll & Driscoll, acting as counsel for the accused veteran, will fight extradition and demand specifications from New York before they will consent to a hearing. Dr. Hanson declares that the arrest of Shanley is due to mistaken identity.

Fresh From Paris

PARIS, France.

WITH the August openings over, Paris is centring its attention on furs, and particularly on the development of the short jacket to be worn with a fur trimmed skirt or dress. In the sketch at the left a charming combination of black velvet and mole fur is shown. The skirt of the straight slip on the dress is bordered, front and back, with the fur, leaving the side panels plain. The short coat, cut on Eton lines, is an exceedingly smart model with long rather wide sleeves and narrow turnover collar.

AN interesting example of of the long, severely tailored coat is seen at the right. Coat cloths vary in Paris, but this almost full-length single-breasted model, worn over a straight narrow skirt, is strongly featured. The fabric is black broadcloth, and it is trimmed with black silk Hercules braid.

North Adams, Aug. 22.—Property estimated to be worth about $20,000 is given to the young men and boys of St. Francis Roman Catholic parish of this city by the will of John Larkin, for more than 50 years an ardent temperance worker, who died here last week. The will provides that property be turned into a trust fund for the obtaining of a building for recreational purposes.

DRYS TO INTERROGATE PINGREE AND ANDREW

Salem, Aug. 22.—Ransom B. Pingree of Haverhill and Colonel A. Piatt Andrew, candidates for Congress from the Sixth District, are expected to define their positions on public enforcement at a rally in Salem Willows Wednesday afternoon. The meeting is under the auspices of the women prohibitionists of Essex County. "Are you against any change in the Volstead act that would readmit beer and wine or otherwise weaken enforcement?" is the chief question the women will submit.

BLIGHTS HOPES OF 22 SEEKING ROCKLAND POST

Rockland, Aug. 23.—Twenty-two applicants for the position of postmaster of Rockland, recently declared a first class office with a salary of $3,300, who were to have taken a competitive examination August 29, are disappointed today. They have been informed from Washington that the proposed examination has been cancelled.

The civil service regulations permit the appointment from the classified list, and it is believed the vacancy will be made in that manner.

WOMAN RELATES PERSECUTION OF IRISH PRIESTS

Miss Connery Continues Account of Black and Tan Outrages She Encountered

TORTURED IRELAND

By JAMES B. CONNOLLY

Famous New England Author and Journalist.

Considering these desperadoes absolutely bold the town, there is a most terrible system of spying. I had to burn my notebook in Hanry—it was rather unfortunate—I was so well watched. And everybody I saw was known to them.

I stopped one night in a little hotel, the Central, but I discovered that it was one of the spy places of the Black and Tans. They were very much in the confidence of the hotel people, so I left in the morning and went to the other hotel.

PRIEST'S BICYCLE BARRED.

Then they wanted to know why I had left. So the people in the second hotel were very nervous, so afraid they might come in and search me that I burned my notebook, and it was rather a handicap. I used to go around with a piece of paper in my hat and notebooks in my shoes.

The priest in Hanry was Father Hurley. I heard some Ulster Specials (Orange Black and Tans) were down there, and theirs is an extraordinarily vicious feeling towards a priest.

I went to see Father Hurley, a fine Irish speaker. They have that man persecuted. He has a parish of fourteen miles, paying sick calls, and they won't allow a bicycle to be used. You can imagine the difficulties of getting around.

Black and Tans everywhere, and wherever he meets them he is insulted by them. Several Sundays they prevented him saying mass. On one occasion they knocked him off his bicycle, insulted him, used filthy language, searched him.

Another time he was going on a sick call, carrying the Blessed Sacrament in his pocket on the inside of his vest. He said:

"It is the Blessed Sacrament. I am going on a sick call."

"Let's see the Blessed Sacrament, let's see what it is like."

"No," said Father Hurley. "I couldn't allow you to do that. Surely you realize what it means to me, a priest. I couldn't allow you to do that."

"I suppose you are taking it up to those bloody murderers in the hills. You are another bloody murderer and, you will be jolly lucky if I don't give you the contents of this the first time I meet you" showing him a revolver.

They threatened Father Hurley several times. That Sunday evening I was there we went for a walk up in the hills. It is a beautiful country. Black and Tans were lying in wait in the angles of the road. They stared at him in the most ferocious manner. They never dreamed of saluting.

He said they were English Black and Tans. One or two Irish police turned away quite shamefaced when they met him, but others stared at him and stared at me in a most ferocious manner. A stranger has no right in Ireland, that is the attitude.

I went to Tralee. There was an auxiliary policeman bombed, or shot—I don't know how—in a public house in Tralee. The name of the public house is Knightley's. Mrs. Knightley is an old woman with three sons. Two of the sons were inside the bar, serving these men, and the other son on the premises where they could see him.

FIFTEEN HOUSES DESTROYED.

Immediately this auxiliary was shot they got supplies of bombs, arrested the three boys who were under eyes and could see they had nothing to do with it, drove the old woman out in the street, bombed the house and burned it down—a public house and grocers shop. She is a very old woman and is now living with some relatives.

There is a district called Ballymacelligot about four miles from Tralee. Two or three weeks ago the head of the Black and Tans was shot down on the golf links.

He was a sort of Rowan Colthurst type, who kills for the pleasure of killing. Along about midnight ten lorry loads of Black and Tans descended on Ballymacelligot, a farming district—it was pouring rain and sleet, exceedingly cold—and they proceeded to bomb and burn.

They violently knocked up the different farmhouses they had picked out, in all destroyed fifteen places, including the priest's house. The Ballydwyer co-operative creamery was wiped out completely, also the house of the creamery manager, whose wife was an expected mother.

Father Trant and two curates occupied a fine house with a very nice little grove of larches in front of it. Father Trant and his curates were just going to bed. They were given five minutes to leave the house.

CHILDREN HOMELESS

Everything in the house, excepting their clothes, was destroyed. They even burned and wrecked the little grove of trees in front of the house. The housekeeper was driven out partially dressed. They wouldn't allow the priests to take anything at all.

Father Trant is an elderly, delicate priest. The local woman school teacher, they burned her out. Her name was Ready, and they shot a man named Ready outside the Ballydwyer creamery last Christmas day, which was sufficient reason to burn her house now.

Continued Tomorrow.

An appeal to Henry Ford for the gift of an automobile to aid in their work among disabled ex-service men was made today by the Massachusetts Association of Disabled Veterans of the World War, a newly formed organization with headquarters in the State House.

The appeal, sent in the form of a letter signed by William H. Burns, president of the society, outlines the work the association is doing for disabled men and their families, and points out that the work would be expedited greatly if an automobile were available.

The
U.S. ROYAL CORD

A famous tire—a famous friend. Acknowledged among motorists and dealers alike as the world's foremost example of Cord tire building. Always delivering the same repeated economy, tire after tire and season after season. The stripe around the sidewalls is registered as a trademark in the U. S. Patent Office.

To Car-Owners Everywhere—

About the Tire Merchant who is Happy in his Business

EVEN today some motorists are still looking for the ideal tire dealer.

Alert, courteous, carrying a complete stock of good tires. As eager to serve you with a valve cap or a tube, as with a new spare.

His enthusiasm a reflection of his clean business and his happy relations with his customers.

• • •

With midseason here—the sales of U. S. Royal Cords all over the country during April, May, June and July, 1921, exceed the same four months of last year by 88 per cent.

You might expect merchants who are seeing such remarkable sales increases to be preoccupied with figures to the exclusion of all else.

Yet you will not be surprised to hear them speak of the pleasure of handling Royal Cord Tires.

The cleanliness of the transaction. The fine kind of people attracted to their stores. The freedom from worry. Satisfied, permanent customers. Steady demand as against "spotty" sales.

• • •

There is so much glib talk these days of "merchandising" in the abstract, that perhaps some have overlooked the need of a man being happy as well as prosperous.

What keeps business more satisfying than the pleasure of dealing in quality? Of having the authority of quality? Of creating self-respect both in buyer and seller?

As U. S. Royal Cords are doing today.

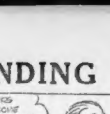
THE CHAP WHO LOSES HIS TEMPER CAN'T EVEN UP MATTERS BY FINDING FAULT

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS



HUTCHISON SAYS VARDON SPURRED HIM ON TO GREATER EFFORTS

By Jock Hutchison

(British Open Champion and American Professional Champion)

I am going to admit frankly that Harry Vardon, whom we all look upon as the world's best golfer, had considerable to do with my winning of the British championship at St. Andrews this Summer.

It was his visit to this country in 1920 that started me thinking about my own game. I saw considerable of his play over here last year with Ted Ray, who took our cup back to England. I played against them several times in exhibition matches and had an excellent opportunity of observing this master golfer's style. Besides this, I had several talks with Vardon about my own method of play.

I was not satisfied with the game and was constantly on the lookout for any ideas that would improve it. When a man reaches the point in his career where he considers himself a finished product and beyond helpful suggestions from his fellow beings, he has reached the beginning of the end.

* * *

Every duffer who has swung at a golf ball and missed it, or who has developed that chronic hook or slice that is a constant source of worry, should take heart. There is yet hope.

Every second-rater who has been near to winning a championship and has repeatedly failed, should heed this advice.

Since I was a little boy carrying clubs in my spare time and doing a little playing on my own account on the old St. Andrews Links, I was led to believe that the only way to play a golf shot was to play for a wee hook. I built my game up on this theory and although I had been able to get fairly satisfactory results I was not wholly satisfied.

I was continually getting into trouble by hooking my ball at times when it was most aggravating. A bad fault always does develop at the most inopportune moment.

But now it is Jock Hutchison the slicer, if you please, instead of Jock Hutchison the hooker. I must qualify this statement a little. What I mean by changing my style from a hook to a slice is that I have followed the Vardon method of play in using the fade-away. Even from the tee I use this shot just as Harry does.

The fade-away can best be described as a straight shot to all purposes now intents with just a wee suspicion of a slice.

On the modern golf course a tee shot must be played. This is more important even than obtaining long distance. The slugger does not always control his drive, while the fade-away shot is always under control. Only occasionally will one of these shots go astray.

The second shot to the green, or on a long hole, to the green's edge, must also be under perfect control, as one is less likely to find trouble with it. All hooked shots have an overspin which produces a lot of run. There is such a thing as too much run.

* * *

On a three shot hole one might invite trouble with a little too much hook. The ball might easily find a trap guarding the green or continue on over into rough along the edge of the fairway, although on one's own land. We all know the old familiar cry that comes back from the caddies: "Out o' bounds."

It is particularly annoying those days with that extra penalty stroke.

The ball that drops onto the green with the fadeaway, rolling from left to right towards the pin, is one of the best shots in the game.

All of the stars play this sort of an approach. A hooked ball to the green is treacherous oftentimes because of the uncertain roll. It is not an uncommon occurrence for the little white pill to continue on over the green like a scared rabbit, and play hide and seek in the long grass.

* * *

So, after due deliberation last Summer, I decided to reconstruct my game and make it more like Vardon's. Always at the back of my mind game is my mashie-niblick approach with the back spin, and my putting. I use the fadeaway mostly on the long iron shots in the green. It is little use shooting an iron shot to a green that is any great distance away unless some sort of control is maintained over the ball.

I worked this new theory out a little last Fall, but it was mostly on my visit to St. Andrews in the Winter that I found time to practice sufficiently to make it reasonably complete. My scores began to improve immediately and the ancient St. Andrews links held no terrors for me from that time on. With my new game I was able to play the old course as I knew it ought to be played.

* * *

On my return to this country I went South. I had always dreaded playing Pinehurst and never seemed to make a good showing there. With my new mode of play, Pinehurst looked to me like a different proposition altogether. Heretofore, my second shots had been popping onto the green and bounding off, but I had solved the secret of stopping on them and greens and the result was that last Spring I won the North and South open for the first time.

My golf, I think, continued to improve and on my return to St. Andrews, I was playing better golf than in the Winter months.

And I let well enough alone. I would not be writing this article now, because I am sure I would never have won the British open championship.

* * *

Nine-tenths of the tournament golfers have something that would stand improvement. Nine-tenths of them are looking for the trouble at round-counting their game. It is that they are afraid to make any experiment.

Do not doing a thing or losing an opportunity is a mistake. All of this takes time, as the new shots must be learned first, and then comes long practice to make them perfect. It is sometimes harder to change your style than it is to start golf.

If there is anything that I could do to improve my own play now I would do it. I am playing better golf than ever before. Experience has taught me the value of the fade-away shot, and I will explain the fade-away in detail shortly.

TIGER FOOTBALL TEAM LOSES STAR MEN

By JAMES FRANCIS.

New York, Aug. 22.—Testifying before a coroner's jury concerning itself over the sudden demise of the Old Orange Tiger, a speeding locomotive, Knut Jensen spoke to wit and us as follows:

"Ole and me ban walk home along railroad. Train she come and Aye quick yump away. Train she go and Aye ban look around for Ole Olson. He nowhere and Aye ban walk on alone. Aye walk for five minute and see no Ole, and then Aye say to myself:

"'Something it happen to Ole Olson.'"

And, take it from Bill Roper, who ought to know, "something it happen to the Princeton football team."

Does any man in the audience remember the great team Princeton was to have this Fall, with the loss of only four veterans from the 1920 championship outfit? One of them, gentlemen, your haste is unseemly. Certainly, everyone remembers.

"Yes, it was a great team," Bill Roper told the writer at the luncheon dinner given in honor of the visiting Oxford and Cambridge athletes. "It was just that."

Somewhat startled by his use of the past tense, we were constrained to ask the reason. It was forthcoming immediately.

"Instead of losing only four veterans," Coach Roper explained, "we will retain only four—namely, Stan Keck, Don Sutter, Hank Garrity and Olney. The rest are either ineligible or have left college."

And there you have the left to right on Princeton prospects for the hardest season ever mapped out for a Tiger eleven. Gone are Dickinson and McManmon, the two guards; former Captain Callahan, the center; Hooper, a varsity tackle; and Lengyel, Stinger, Haviland and Davis, the alternating sets of varsity ends, not to forget Frank Murphy, who left the Yale side line in the first half of last year's great Tiger triumph, and Joe Scherer, one of the best punters in the East.

Of these named, Callahan, Scherer, Logendre and Dickinson have graduated; the others have left college.

By no means the rose-tinted future that Bill Roper and Nat Fox looked upon at the conclusion of last Fall's successful campaign. It means that they will have to construct an entirely new forward line around Stan Keck.

Of course Keck is something of a foundation to build upon, speaking in a loose and offhand manner. The fact that he is one of those who will return means that at least one side of the line will be solid. Two sides, but it always takes two sides to make a story.

It will be no part of a sinecure for Roper when he brings a green line against the Navy at Annapolis, Chicago at Princeton, and subsequently the two big clashes of the year with Harvard and Yale.

There is an old gridiron saying that a team is no stronger than its forward line.

In this connection Roper is pleased to announce that "Pink" Baker, a varsity guard of two years ago, will be available. "Pink" will plug one of the holes in the line, and it is likely that Witmer will substitute back when Roper characterizes as the best defensive football player he has ever seen, will be used at center.

Witmer will hardly be needed in the backfield, since Laurie and Garrity, all-American choices, and Gilroy, a fine defensive player, assure another smart combination behind the line.

The fourth member of the backfield probably will be Jack Thompson, the present A. A. U. all around champion.

Much is expected of Thompson, who apparently can do everything a football man should do except keep himself out of the hospital.

In this respect Thompson's greatest enemy seems to be an empty beer glass, but perhaps luck will be with him this year.

With these players as a nucleus, the team is by no means a forlorn hope. Coach Roper has other chats up to sweep everything before it this Fall. That, according to Roper, is not but a mirage that led him nowhere.

Planning Busy Season

A busy season is being planned by the Middlesex Sportsmen's Association during the coming season in its new club house, formerly the Arlington Boat Club, on the shores of Spy Pond, in Arlington. Something will be held each Thursday evening, starting September 8, when Captain Daniel McKay, formerly of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, will give a talk.

By Charles E. Parker

Greater Boston gains its opportunity of witnessing championship tennis this week, for beginning this afternoon on the Chestnut Hill courts of the Longwood Cricket Club are the National men's doubles and the National mixed doubles title events, with all the stars of the nation paired for play.

Big Bill Tilden, the National singles titlist, also winner of the British singles, and a leading factor in bringing the Davis cup to America, is paired with Vincent Richards, the eighteen-year-old sensation from New York, and in as much as this combination won the doubles title two years ago and are reported in better form than ever before, they are ruling the favorites for the men's doubles.

To win, however, they must face and overcome the stiffest opposition, for among the combinations listed are R. Norris Williams, 2nd, of Boston and Watson M. Washburn of New York; William M. Johnston of California, the former singles titlist, and his fellow-Californian, Willis Davis; Bert and Howard Kinsey, who hold the Pacific coast doubles title; W. A. Larned and W. J. Clothier, veteran former champions, and Maxwell Wecsman, captain of the British Davis cup team, and his teammate, O. G. N. Turnbull.

Tilden and Richards are in the lower half while the other combinations abide named are in the upper half. The two British Davis cup players will meet the Clothier-Larned combine in one of the opening matches. Johnston and Davis drew a bye in the first round and appear in the upper bracket of the second round.

TRAP SHOOTERS GATHER FOR HANDICAP

Grand American Handicap, Feature of Big Meet, Slated for Friday

Chicago, Aug. 22.—The Grand American Handicap Trap Shooting Tournament was to begin here today, entrants being on hand from every State in the Union. The tourney will last one week and will be shot at the South Shore Country Club.

The biggest event in point of number taken place on Friday—one Grand American Handicap.

The classic event of the week takes place on Tuesday, August 23—the National Amateur Championship. Only the champions of the States and Canadian provinces and the Canal Zone are eligible to shoot in the event.

The South Shore Introductory, at 100 targets, opens the shoot. In connection with this event the Woman's Trapshooting championship and the Five Man team championship will be decided, and the teams for the East and West team race of Tuesday will be chosen.

Besides the team race on Tuesday the Lake Michigan special, the junior trapshooting championship and the amateur and professional championships will be shot.

Thursday the preliminary handicap takes place, and Saturday the Classification shoot.

Not many years ago women were a curiosity at a trapshooting tournament; in fact a great effort was made to keep them from shooting.

But this is all changed today. Now every effort is made to get the fair sex out, and this year championships for women were conducted in seventy-three States.

This is more than twice as many championships as were conducted in 1920. In some of the State shoots there were a dozen or more women contestants.

PLAYGROUNDS IN COMPETITION TOMORROW

Semi-Finals Will be Held at Franklin Park With Finals Thursday

Thousands of girls and boys of Boston's playgrounds will meet in Franklin Park tomorrow and Thursday to take part in the fourth annual inter-playground meet, semi-finals and finals that will be held to mark the close of the Summer season.

This affair is looked forward to with great interest by the youngsters who patronize the city's breathing spots, the games being the cause of considerable enthusiasm on the part of the children and teachers alike.

There are twenty-one leagues which will meet in three lines of activities for both girls and boys. There are girls' and boys' checker teams, beanbag clubs and squash ball organizations at each playground. These will all play to decide the championships.

The parks, in addition to these sports have separate baseball teams for both juniors and seniors which will also display their best to bring themselves into the finals.

The finals will be held Thursday. A large gathering of rooters will cheer for the two teams in each sport that will fight for top honors in this hotly contested affair.

ST. ANDREWS C. C. DEFEATS MAYNARD

The St. Andrews' Catholic Club defeated the Maynard Town team yesterday, 6 to 2. Clavin and Donaldson were the battery for Maynard, while Condoix and Feeley were in the points for the St. Andrew nine. The St. Andrews made a dozen hits off Clavin, while Condoix held Maynard to four scattered safe drives. Flynn's batting was the feature, He made a two-bagger and two singles. Condoix had ten strike-outs and Clavin had five to his credit. Foley, Flynn, Mahoney, two, and Murphy scored for St. Andrews and Smith and Gregg for Maynard.

Manager J. J. Collins, whose telephone is Jamaica 212, announces that the St. Andrews team would like to arrange games with fast semi-pro teams for next Saturday and Sunday.

STALLINGS TO MANAGE PROFESSIONAL ELEVEN

Washington, Aug. 22.—George Stallings, famous pilot of the Washington Braves, will bring his Rochester, Ramblers, professional football team here this fall to play the Washington Football Club. Stallings is now managing the Rochester International League team, but at the end of the season will devote himself to football.

The Washington eleven, which will play on Sundays, has several other contests scheduled. The Canton Bulldogs, under the leadership of Bib Higgins, former All-American end; Jim Thorpe's newly formed Toledo eleven and Charley Brickley's Metropolitan A. C. are also scheduled.

SHEVLIN AND SIEGAL GET BUSY FOR NEAR TITLE BOUT NEXT MONTH

By JACK CONWAY.

Nate Siegal, former New England welterweight champion, will box for Diamond Bill Shevlin, Rhode Island welterweight champion, in the early part of this week to start off his ten-round bout with Eddie Shevlin, which will be staged at the Revere Cycle Track on September 1.

Siegal convinced himself he is as good as ever when he recently trounced Mike Morley, conqueror of Jack Britton at Salem. With another fine in which to get into condition for his frolic with Shevlin, the Revere boy is confident he will smash his way to a decisive victory.

* * *

Shevlin will train for the match at Hanover, N. H., where he has constructed an arena in the open air.

* * *

Boston fans were pleased at the announcement that Pinkey Mitchell, brilliant Milwaukee lightweight, will show at the Arena A. C. next Monday night. Mitchell, a brother of Ritchie Mitchell, is an undefeated fighting man. He has fought virtually every lightweight and welterweight in the country of note. He makes his Eastern debut in a fifteen-round bout with Willie Jackson at Madison Square Garden last Winter. Honors were fifty-fifty after a gruelling tussle.

* * *

Tendler, Dundee and the other fast steppers in the lightweight class have all failed in their efforts to crush the fighting spirit of the Western youth. In Pitsinimons, Mitchell will be meeting a terrific puncher. Few lightweights and welterweights for that matter, can defeat Pitsimmons when the New York boy is in there to win. And we believe that Morgan's fighter has been taught his lesson and will give his best efforts herewith, especially when showing in a New England ring.

* * *

Frankie (Young) Britt of New Bedford will have Young Gradwell of Newark as an opponent at the same show. It will be interesting to see how Gradwell performs against a seasoned campaigner like Britt. The Whaler is out claiming the junior lightweight championship of America, now that it is a sure thing that Benny Leonard cannot make within five pounds of the old lightweight limit of 133 pounds.

* * *

Henry Meyers has added Carlo Armstrong to his string of boxers. The Charlestown man says that his protege would like to start his new campaign by meeting Hambone Kelly. This gentleman has been knocking his opponents for goals with great precision. Armstrong, however, is one of those young men who believe that the bigger they are the harder they fall and he believes he can conquer the Hambone person.

* * *

Johnny Wilson, world's middleweight champion, is all ready to hop aboard one of those well-known ruffians, for New York, where he is billed to complete training for his twelve-round title battle with Jean Dempsey on the afternoon of Labor Day. The bout will not be staged at Doyle's Thirty Acres under the direction of Tex Rickard.

Wilson will be fit when he enters the ring. This means that the champion will retain his crown. Dempsey is a rugged fellow with a heavy punch in his right, but he has not any license to defeat the boss of the middleweights.

* * *

Wilson was treated roughly by Downey at Cleveland because the Charlestown man was in poor condition for the match. He had underestimated his opponent and so had not trained properly. Johnny is not so unwise as to commit the same error twice. He will do some real training for the Jersey City match which will mean that he will surge to victory. As no decision was given in Jersey City, Downey must score a knockout to win the title.

GOVERNOR'S DAY AT GRAND CIRCUIT

Readville Sets Aside Sept. 1 in Honor of Bay State's Chief Magistrate

The directors of the Readville Grand Circuit meeting have invited Governor Cox to attend the races on September 1, the closing day, which will be dedicated to him and will be known as Governor's Day. He has been a valiant supporter of the American trotter and pacer. He is a brother of Walter Cox, the reinsman.

The directors have also invited Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, U. S. A., commanding the Department of the Northeast, Department of War, to be a guest upon Wednesday, August 31. General Edwards is a reinsman of ability and in days past held his own on the cutting course at Cleveland.

The directors have also invited Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, U. S. N., the commandant of the Boston Navy Yard, to attend the same day, which will be known as army and navy day and on which will be held the renewal of the American Horse Breeder Futurity, value $3,500.

PIRATES SURE OF FLAG UNLESS THEY FALL IN A TERRIBLE SLUMP

By NICK FLATLEY.

Speaking in figures, the Pirates haven't quite cinched that National League pennant yet, but as an actual matter of fact the team has battled itself into a very comfortable position. Nothing but a terrible slump, and the history of the season gives no evidence that such a thing will happen, can knock Gibson's hustling crew out of the title.

Both Braves and Giants had splendid chances to knock down the big lead the Corsairs manufactured in the first few months, but when the real showdown arrived, neither team had quite enough kick to wiggle through.

The Pirates, who play the second game of their series with the Braves this afternoon, have forty more games scheduled. If they break even, they will wind up with these figures:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Pittsburgh	94	60	.610

Our Braves have forty-two contests ahead. To haul back the Pittsburgh outfit breaking even in that stretch, the Mitchmen must win thirty and lose but twelve. That clip isn't out of the question, but it's no longer possible to hope that the leaders will lose any of the momentum that carried them up through the early August flutter, when Braves and Giants both surged toward the attic, and has them, meaning the Pirates, farther out in front right now than they have been at any time since early Summer.

It's only reasonable to suppose that Maranville and Co. will win at least twenty-five of their remaining pastimes. In such case their standing will be:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Pittsburgh	99	55	.643

To tie that the Braves and Giants will have to travel as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Boston	35	7	.833
New York	29	7	.806

Neither team seems quite up to that speed, with the lowly members of the league showing unexpected strength all along the line. And even if the pursuing clubs could step out and split things wide open, the Pirates would probably keep them company. They've been doing that thing ever since the race tightened up.

The Giants have been beating Pittsburgh quite consistently throughout the campaign, and the Braves have staged some of the greatest battles in local history with the same pacemakers. But the Westerners cut loose when they hit the second divisioners, and the habit has just about garnered the gonfalon for them.

Second place is something else again, and nobody will be greatly astounded if Mitchell's scrappy crew winds up right back of the glory. The Braves have been walloped by the McGraws thus far, but the only series that arrived after the Tribe had found its real strength was abbreviated by rain. A couple of double-headers that the then flying Braves were well in the way of winning were put over, and the two teams still have some three of the bargain matinees to put through in New York, beginning Labor Day.

The clubs stand as follows this blithe August day:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Giants	70	48	.593
Braves	64	48	.571

Both have been breaking even for the past three weeks. A little spurt by the Braves, while the Polo Grounders failed to improve their gait, would elevate Boston one notch in the well-known standing of the clubs. By dividing their remaining thirty-six jousts, the Giants can finish:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Giants	88	66	.571

To nose them out, the Mitchmen must win twenty-five, and hand over but seventeen to the enemy. Then their totals would be:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Braves	89	65	.578

Such a conclusion isn't at all impossible, even though the Braves finish their business on the road, after entertaining the Cardinals here to finish the week, and the Reds immediately thereafter.

Whatever happens, the fans are satisfied with the team. The Braves have been hustling and fighting against all kinds of adverse conditions, and that's all the local populace demand of any flock of athletes.

RED SOX HELP INDIANS IN FLAG RACE

Cleveland Looks for Third Victory Today Over the Boston Team

Cleveland, O., Aug. 22.—If the Red Sox hope to help the Yankees regain the lead in the American League flag chase on this trip they must buoy themselves today, for that will be the final appearance of Hugh Duffy's boys here!

Sam Jones or Joe Bush will draw the assignment against the World's Champions and if the truth be told the Indians are hoping it will be Bush instead of Jones, for they have been more or less successful against Bush and less successful against Jones. Sam, however, appears to have the inside track to face the Tribers.

* * *

The Red Sox tried their luck for the second time in two days against the league leaders yesterday, but Allan Sothoron proved far too classy for them. He held them to six scattered hits, not two of the number coming in the same inning and shut them out, 4 to 0.

Allan Russell was opposed to the Indians and while he did a good job of pitching he could not stand up under three miscues on the part of his team mates in the third round, the Indians counting three runs and sewing up the victory to all intents and purposes.

The Indians made but seven hits but they drew three passes and Russell passed only one man.

Sothoron, on the other hand, did not frank a single runner and struck out seven. Thormahlen pitched the eighth inning.

SOUTH BOSTON TWIRLER HAS NEW RECORD

Walter McDonough Pitches a Record No-Hit Game for SS. Peter and Paul Nine

Walter McDonough, 19 years old, pitched his second no-run, no-hit game of the season for the SS. Peter and Paul's nine of South Boston, yesterday. His team defeated the St. James Catholic Club at the Randolph Street playgrounds. The score of the victory for the South Boston boys was 6 to 0. Only one of the St. James boys reached second base. Steve McDonough, not a brother of the pitcher, shortstop, knocked out a home run. Slattery scored two runs in three onsays at the bat. The batteries were: McDonough and Burns and Slattery for SS. Peter and Paul's and Williams and Murphy for St. James.

The Randolph A. A. defeated the Alpha A. A. in the third and deciding game of a three-game series on the Pond Street grounds, Braintree, yesterday, 8 to 6. The batteries were: Taylor and Campbell for the Alphas and Niles and Parker for Randolph. Randolph wants to arrange games away from home for Saturday with a fast semi-pro team. Those who desire to communicate with the manager may telephone to Randolph 109-J or write a letter to Dewey Stoltz, No. 206 Liberty street, Randolph.

The Village A. A. defeated the Somerville Cardinals, 13 to 5, in a game at the Huntington Avenue grounds, yesterday. The batteries were: McGrail and Hatch for the Village A. C., and O'Hara and Hogan for the Somerville Cardinals. McGrail struck out eleven and Donovan made a shoestring catch in centre field.

WOMAN FAILS TO SWIM CHANNEL, CLAIMS RECORD

London, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Arthur Hamilton again has failed in an attempt to swim the English Channel. She reports having left Cape Gris Nez, near Calais, at 11 o'clock Saturday morning and to have got within three miles of Deal, on the English side, Sunday morning, where she was compelled to abandon the swim. She says she was in the water twenty hours.

Mrs. Hamilton today expressed satisfaction at having accomplished what she claims to be a world's record for women swimmers, both as regards distance covered and time in the water. She is a daughter of Sir Charles Fairlie-Cunninghame.

Captain Matthew Webb and T. W. Burgess are the only persons on record as having accomplished the task of swimming the Channel. Webb swam across in 1875 in 21 hours and 45 minutes, and Burgess in 1911 in 22 hours and 35 minutes.

DUTCH BILLIARD PLAYERS COMING TO THIS SIDE

Bos, another young Dutch player of promise, will invade the United States next Winter to play for the International title, according to a cablegram received here yesterday. The international matches will be played about the first of February and the invading players will meet the winner and runner-up in the national tournament to be staged several weeks before the International commences. Rudil visited this country before the war.

MEDBURY

Says It's Time That We Took the Liberty Bell Out and Rang It Again

By the way these blue laws are being drafted it looks like we've got to fight for our independence all over again.

It's time we took the Liberty Bell out and rang it once more.

Of course it's cracked, but no are the heads of the reformers, but the people listen to them just the same.

We could borrow some cattle from the Chicago stockyards and fight another Battle of Bull Run.

We could have another Boston Tea Party and if we ran out of tea we could finish it with coffee.

There's no doubt but what we could win by about 434 demi tasses.

And there are plenty of tea shops where we could fight the battles.

We'd be sure to win if the blue enemy didn't steal the teapots.

They can take the cups, but we can win the victory if they leave us the saucers.

We're all trained for the hardships at Valley Forge after living in heatless apartments.

We're not afraid of snow and ice after dealing with landlords.

They made it cold for us; let's make it hot for them.

Paul Revere is dead, but there are plenty of other good jockeys.

We can give him a press pass so that the traffic cops won't hold him up.

This time he can take his ride in California, where the roads are better.

He should start his ride at 4 a. m., but it's going to be hard to find a man who gets up that early.

If we can't get a horse, why not put a bridle and saddle on one of the reformers.

Let Mr. Revere take his ride on Saturday and wait until Monday to feed his horse. When the blue law horse kicks about it just tell him that we don't work on Sunday.

YOUNG SWIMMERS HAVE DAY OF RACES AT CITY BEACHES

The Park Department of the city of Boston brought the out-of-door swimming season to a close, holding water carnivals at the different beaches throughout the city yesterday. These events were for the younger folks under eighteen years of age, but were gratly enjoyed by the large throng of residents of the different districts and the many friends of the contestants.

Two meets were held in Dorchester for the youth of that district, one at Savin Hill Beach, and the other took place at the Freeport street bathhouse. A large gathering of people turned out at each place, Savin Hill having five thousand or more interested spectators, while Freeport street had a smaller gathering, but just as enthusiastic as at the former beach.

Miss Eunice Aberle of Dorchester, was the outstanding star at Savin Hill, and although only a little shaver of fourteen years of age, had the pleasure of winning three of the gold medals in the diving events for both senior and juniors, the graceful Eunice outclassed the little ones of her own age and then turned about in the senior event and showed her prowess to the older mermaids by taking first place also.

Again in the 100-yard swim for girls this sterling youngster when a few feet from the float changed from a side stroke to an overhand and defeated Leonora LeVeque, the other star, by six inches. Miss Lewis was runner-up on the Aberle child, winning one first and two second prizes.

Eunice last season finished among the first ten in the Boston American swim in the Charles River, and has entered again this coming Saturday.

The races for boys and young men really lacked the thrills of the fairer sex, but the larger number of contestants made it more difficult to show much speed.

At the meet held at Freeport Beach there was an intense local interest because Anna Sodaberg and Mary Anderson contested in the 100-yard swim for girls in the senior event. For the past few years neither of these girls has met defeat. Yesterday Anna Sodaberg finished in front of her rival by a margin of two yards. This race, however, has still got the folks wondering who is really the better.

George Alger, one of New England's most prominent life-savers and expert swimmers, gave an exhibition of life-saving and fancy diving.

This meet was a dual competition between Texas and the Freeport Beach bathers. The Freeport street bathers came out on top, winning 51 points to 37.

BOXERS MUST POST FORFEITS OF $5,000

New York, Aug. 22.—Promoter Tex Rickard has demanded that Johnny Wilson and Bryan Downey post $5,000 each immediately as a weight and appearance forfeit for their title contest at Jersey City July 4 or September 5, instead of the $1,000 both managers agreed on after the promoter left for Chicago last week. On his return from the Windy City Friday night Rickard insisted on the raise in the forfeit and also that boxers come to New York so that their boxing will be carefully watched by the Boxing Commission.

Robert W. Chambers' Famous Story THE STREETS OF ASCALON Illustrated by Charles Dana Gibson

The Story of a Beautiful Girl and the Man for Whom She Made a Great Sacrifice

A Spirited and Swiftly Moving Romance of Hearts and High Society, by the Greatest Living Master of Fiction

WHAT HAS HAPPENED.

Dick Quarren, society idler and spendthrift, but clever and good looking, has fallen desperately in love with Strelsa Leeds. She has had one unfortunate matrimonial experience, and since her advent into New York high society has admirers by the score. Quarren meets her first at a masked ball given by Molly Wycherly, wins an hour out of her life on a wager and refrains from kissing her, as he tells her he is eager to do. She tells him there can be not one serious between them, but she asks him to disregard this evil of her. The Dankmere galleries are opened and Quarren takes a few days off at Witch-Hollow. Strelsa tells him she is to marry Langly Sprowl. He tells her that he loves her. Strelsa refuses to him the story of her marriage to Leeds. He returns to town and finds Westgard giving a lively party in the art gallery. Quarren hires a pretty stenographer. Dankmere falls in love with her. Strelsa discovers Sprowl's true character and refuses to marry him. Sprowl enrages Miss Vining and Dankmere blacks his eye. He tells the stenographer he loves her.

HE had come here for martyrdom, caressed in patience. Every atom of common sense warned him to go.

But also every physical sense in him was now fully aroused—the silvery star-dusk, the scent of lilies, a slender woman within arm's reach—this woman who had once been so nearly his—who was still rightfully his!—these circumstances were arousing him once more to a temerity which his better sense warned him to subdue. Yet if he could only get nearer to her—if he could once get her into his arms—overwhelm her with the storm of passion rising so swiftly within him, almost choking him—so that his voice and limbs already trembled in its furious surge—

"Strelsa—I love you! For God's sake show me some mercy!" he stammered. "I come to you half crazed by the solitude to which your anger has consigned me. I cannot endure it—I need you—I want you—I ask for your compassion—"

"Hush!" she pleaded, hastily retreating before him through the snowy banks of rockets—"I have asked you not to speak to me that way! I ask you to go—to go now! —because—"

"Will you listen to me? Will you wait a moment? I am only trying to tell you that I love you, dear!—

He almost caught her, but she sprang aside, frightened, still retreating before him.

"I cannot go until you listen to me!"—he said thickly, trampling through the flowers to intercept her. "You've got to listen—do you hear?"

She had almost reached the terrace; the shadowy veranda opened widely beyond.

Voice Choked

"There are people here! Don't you understand?" she said once more in a choking voice, but he only advanced, and she fell back before him to the very edge of the porch lattice.

"Now listen to me!" he said between his teeth. "I love you and I'll never give you up"——

"Be silent!" she whispered fiercely, "I tell you what you say is indecent, revolting! If there were a man here he'd kill you! Do you understand?"

At the same instant his eyes became fixed on a figure in white which took shadowy shape on the dark veranda, rising and coming slowly forward.

Great like as it was, he knew it instantly, and would not. His tactics while Strelsa stole away from him through the star-lit gloom, fortune, rather, whipping forever from him now—he knew that as he stood there staring like a damned man upon that other dim shape in the darkness beyond.

It was his first glimpse of her since her return from Reno. And now, unbidden, memories half strangled were in full resurrection, gauging in his ears of things that had been—of forgotten passion, of pleasure promised; and, because never tasted, it had been the true and only pleasure for such a man as now—the pleasure of anticipation. But the world had never would never believe that. Only he, and the phantom there in the dusk before him, knew it to be true.

Slightly reeling he turned away in the darkness. To his haunted ears sounded a young wife's voice, promising, caressing; through and through him shot a thrill of the old excitement, the old desire, urging him again toward belated consummation.

And again the old impatience seized him, the old ruthlessness, the old anger at finding her weak as every woman is, except in her contempt which had turned to sullen amazement when she wrote him that she had come to Reno and that they must wait for their happiness until the courts decreed it legal!

The Old Folly.

Now as he swung along under the high stars he was thinking of these things. And he felt that he had not tried her enough, had not really exerted himself—that woman who so feels requires closer watching than clever ones; that he could have overcome her scruples with any real effort and saved her from giving him the dry and scorching wind in Reno which already had become enough of a breeze to bother him.

With Mary Ledwith, for a while, he might be able to distract his mind from that recent obsession tormenting him. To overcome her would interest him; and he had no doubt it could be done—for she was a little fool—silly enough to slap the world in the face and brave public opinion at Reno. It was not necessary to marry such a woman. She might think so, but it wasn't.

He had behaved unwisely too. Why should he not have gone to see her when she arrived? By doing so, and acting cleverly, he could have avoided trouble with his aunt and also the annoying newspaper paragraphs.

Also he could have avoided the scene with Ledwith—and the short-ed reconciliation just now with Strelsa, where he had stood staring at the apparition of Mary Ledwith as lost souls stand transfixed before the pallid shades of those whom they have destroyed.

At his feet crate a half-cowering dog fawned on him, and he kicked it aside. The bruised creature fled, and Sprowl turned in at his gates and walked slowly up the cypress-bordered drive.

He thought it all out that night, studied it carefully. What he needed was distraction from the present torment. Mary Ledwith could give that to him. What a fool she had been ever to imagine that she could be anything more than his temporary mistress.

"The damned little idiot," he mused—"cutting away to Reno before I knew what she was up to—and involving us both in all that talk! What did she flatter herself I wanted, anyway. . . . But I ought to have called on her at once! now it's going to be difficult."

All Thought Out

Yet he suddenly welcomed the difficulty — hoped that she'd hold out. That was what he wanted—the excitement of it to take his mind from Strelsa—keep him interested and employed until the moment arrived once more when he might venture to see her again. He was, by habit, a patient man. Only in the case of Strelsa Leeds had passion ever prematurely betrayed him; and, pacing his porch there in the darkness, he set his teeth and wondered at himself and cursed himself, unable to reconcile what he knew of himself with what he had done to the only woman he had ever wished to marry as a last resort.

For two weeks Sprowl kept to himself. For men understood better than he what was the medicinal value of time. Only once had he dared ignore it.

A New Move

So one evening, late in August, still dressed in knickerbockers and heather spats, he walked from his lawn across country to make the first move in a new game with Mary Ledwith.

Interested, confident, already amused, and in far better spirits than he had been for many a day, he strode out across the fields, swinging his walking-stick, his realless eyes seeing everything and looking directly at nothing.

Which was a mistake on his part for once, because, crossing a pasture corner, he, own bull, advancing silently from a clump of willows, nearly caught him; but Sprowl went over the fence and, turning, brought down his heavy stick across the brute's ringed nose; and the animal bellowed at him and fled to the red and followed along inside the fence thundering his baffled fury as long as Sprowl remained in sight.

It was not all bad disposition, Sprowl, who cared nothing for animals, hated the bull, and, when nothing more attractive offered, was accustomed to come to the fence, irritate the animal, lure him within range, and strike him. He had done it many times; and, some day, he meant to go into the pasture with a rifle, stand the animal's charge, and shoot him.

It was a calm, primrose-tinted sunset where trees and hills and a distant spire loomed golden-black against the yellow west. No trees had yet turned, although, here and there on wooded hills, single discolored branches broke the green monotony.

No buckwheat had yet been cut, but above the ruddy fields of stalk the snow of the blossoms had become tarnished in promise of maturity—the first premonition of Autumn except for a few harvest apples, yellow amid green leaves.

He had started without any definite plan, a confident but patient opportunist; and as he approached the Ledwith property and finally sighted the chimneys of the house above the trees, something—some errant thought seemed to amuse him, for he smiled slightly. His smile was as rare as his laughter —and as brief; and there remained no trace of it as he swung up the last hill and stood there gazing ahead.

Autumn in Full Charm

The sun had set. A delicate purple haze already dimmed distances; and the twilight which falls more swiftly as Summer deepens into Autumn was already stealing into every hollow and ravine, darkening the alders where the stream stole swampwards. A few ragged crows were still winging towards the woods; a few flocks of blackbirds passed overhead almost unseen against the sky. Somewhere some gardener had been burning leaves and refuse, and the odor made the dusk more Autumn-like.

As he crossed the line separating his land from the Ledwith estate he avoided to the daughter of one of his own gardeners who was passing with a collie; and then he turned to look again at the child whose slender grace and freshness interested him.

TEN DAYS TO LIVE

A SHORT STORY OF A MALICIOUS MISER

By Frank H. Williams

WHEN young John Peterson learned of the death of his miserly old uncle, Amos Peterson, he expected to find that Amos had left him nothing of his extensive fortune. Amos had for years unjustly declared that John was shiftless and absolutely worthless.

Also, Amos had repeatedly announced his intention of cutting John off without a cent.

But John was due for a big surprise. When the will was opened by old Peterson's attorney, this is the astonishing document that they found:

"I will and bequeath my entire fortune to my shiftless, worthless nephew, John, on one condition, namely, that he live long enough to personally present this will for probate on the tenth day after my death. In order to do this John must show that he has brains enough to discover the plan I have evolved for killing him before the expiration of the ten days. He is a 'ho actions' the world over has developed after without him. But I will give him this bare chance to prove that he is worth while and has brains and can do something."

Went to Sweetheart

After having had the contents of the will revealed to him by the attorneys, John took his troubles to pretty Bertha Medaker, his sweetheart.

"There's no doubt that I am in grave danger," said John. "However, I believe that if I cut and run away it might escape it. I think that was one plan my uncle had in mind—to drive me out of the city."

"You stay and fight" counseled Bertha.

"I will win!" explained John, and his lower jaw shot out pugnaciously.

But it was one thing to promise to win and quite another thing to know what to do to win.

What possible means had been devised by his uncle for killing him?

It was the second day after his uncle's death that the will had been read. Two days gone—eight more to live, unless he could avoid the menace and stop it.

Not a single bit of progress did John make during the remainder of this second day.

Nor was he any more successful on the third and fourth days.

The fifth day found him anxious in appearance, harried in manner, shadows bothered him. He became suspicious of strangers. He insisted upon his dog first sampling all food prepared for him. Even his uncle might have bribed the cook to poison his food.

It was the fifth day that Bertha, in a spirit who feared at his condition, called.

The fifth day he went to Peterman's for aid, but she too, was distressed and unable to offer any worthwhile suggestion.

The seventh day the private detective agency whom he had retained after the fifth day as a menace advised him to leave the city.

"I'll not—I'll stick it out and win," cried John. But his face was haggard as he said this, and his voice was unnatural.

And when the tenth day dawned and found John still alive and in good health, his spirits bounded upward. Early in the day he hurried to his car to Bertha's home.

The will was in the safe at the office of the lawyers, where it had been placed after being read. To this office John now drove his car.

Bertha shivered slightly as they went up the rickety old steps to the office. Somehow her fear communicated itself to John. He too, began to feel that now was the most dangerous time.

"The will is in that drawer there," said the lawyer, indicating a certain compartment. "You must open the drawer and take it out yourself—those are the instructions Amos Peterson gave us."

John advanced to the safe. Kneeling down, he placed his fingers on the handle of the drawer. His nerves were tense—he was excited and somewhat afraid.

Now the drawer was three-fourths out. In the shallow drawer John could see the all-important document. He reached forth to touch it and then—

Bertha Screamed

Bertha screamed convulsively.

"Don't touch it—don't touch it, John!" she cried, rushing to him and holding back his hand.

"Don't you see!" she cried, "That paper is poisoned! That's why he said you must personally probate it. That's why you had to open this drawer yourself. Slow poison, that was timed so it would kill you now!"

John gasped. He drew away from the safe in haste.

"I'm right," exclaimed Bertha.

And she was, as a chemical examination showed.

Then, when the paper had been purified, John and Bertha, with the black cloud of fear removed from their hearts, set out with the paper to probate it at the court house.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

She Cannot Love Him.

ISAAC MISS FAIRFAX:

For a year I have been going about with a young man who has learned to love me greatly. Because my parents know him so very well they had no objections to his calling, although I have never been permitted to have other boy friends call upon me. I thought I loved him, but am now convinced that I do not, for after I had the right of my parents to insist upon not going with him when every-thing to be with another man. I know that he is a very good young man, and I respect him greatly, but I cannot love him. I have been told that if I were to un I can have no other friends. What shall I do about it?

WORRIED.

ARE you sure that your objections to the young man aren't entirely a matter of the human contrariness which makes us belittle what we don't have to fight for? Perhaps your theory of dislike would break down if you encountered obstacles instead of all this eagerness to force the young man on you. Your people aren't showing any great amount of tact or wisdom in forcing the man on you, but your very irritation may be a symptom of a liking greater than you understand. Don't let your contrariness (and it's natural enough) make you obstinate or foolish. Remember you don't have to go so far as to marry a man for whom you don't care. Always be conscious that you are a thinking human being and that you have ideas and principles of your own which you must not under any circumstances sacrifice.

Do You Know That—

The sun is only due south in the heavens at noon on four days in the year.

A Trifling Exception

"Ah, old fellow," said the gentleman to another in the street, "I hear that you are married at last. Allow me to congratulate you. So I hear you have an excellent and accomplished wife." "I have indeed, thanks the reply, "she is highly accomplished. Why, sir, she is perfectly at home in literature; at home in art; at home in science—in short, at home everywhere—except—" "Except at home."

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

ROMANCE OF NEWLY WEDDED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"JUST dear, I'll wait for you until the end of time, if I have to—alone and patiently," I said. "I won't make a move that isn't intended to make things easier for you when you do come back. I won't let anyone else interfere with you, dear. And oh! Jimmie boy—where you are, I know what you're doing. I pray this message will reach you—Jim! Jim, you can trust me. I'll stand by and count it a privilege that I may wait—for you!"

As the first move in standing by I determined to go down and have a plain talk with Miss Storrs. Hitherto my pride had kept me from plunging in and asking questions which would betray my absolute ignorance both as to Jim's plans and his whereabouts. But now I felt that I owed it to Jim to talk things over with the woman who was where I belonged to be—in charge of Jim's affairs.

I wanted to run in for a glimpse of Neal first, but I realized that would take me far out of my way and might cost me my chance to see Mabel Storrs this morning. Now that I'd made up my mind to go to her again, I didn't want to lose any more time either. I wasn't sure whether this was because I didn't trust my humble mood to last, or if it was because Dick West's return was driving me to action.

A Message From Lyons

Telephoning to inquire for Neal would save time, so I hurried out to the hall. As I lifted my hand to the receiver the bell jangled its quick summons. I lifted it down, and in response to my impatient "Hello," a guarded voice asked:

"Speak to Mrs. Harrison, please."

"This is Mrs. Harrison," I replied, my heart jumping as it always does nowadays when an unexpected summons makes me hope for the miracle of a message from Jim.

"I'm asking you to let me talk to you, Mrs. Harrison, because I've that to say which you ought to hear," replied Lyons doggedly.

"How soon can you be here?" I asked briskly.

"I'm at the corner drug store telephoning from a booth. I seen Mrs. Dalton on the avenue. Then went over to Mr. Neal's and found Miss Rhodes was there. So I came around here at once, and now—if you'll be permitting I'll call around in half a moment."

"All right, Lyons," I agreed.

Neal must wait. My talk with Miss Storrs would have to be postponed. There was something urgent in the voice of this ex-thief I had befriended. It didn't occur to me to be afraid. It never occurred to me to wonder why this man, who'd been sneaking about in company with "Slim" Jones and Dick West, should suddenly insist on a secret interview with me.

Hurrying down the hall I went out on the elevator, a minute later I was crossing the sidewalk to Anthony Norrey's big limousine which was drawn up a few feet from the entrance to our apartment building. Lyons was completely the respectful servant as he helped me into the car and then got back to the driver's seat. But he asked for no directions. Instead he whirled along purposefully. He evidently had a goal in view.

Thought Twice

Perhaps a less impulsive woman than I would have thought twice before acceding to Lyons' request for an hour of her time. Perhaps a more cautious individual would have cast up accounts against the ex-convict, and would have refused to put herself in the power of the man she'd seen driving Dick West away from Dragon Cave by a right before the shooting. Perhaps even I might at any other time have taken some precautions before starting on this excursion.

But I'd just been down in the depths of misery, that's always ready to engulf me nowadays. I'd let myself give way to my loneliness and my yearning for Jim. And I'd struggled out with the distinction to do whatever lay in my power to help him.

It wasn't easy to reach the decision to go and humiliate myself before the woman Jim had left in charge of his office. But I'd keyed myself up to the point where I was prepared to beg Miss Storrs for information.

I had determined to give her every bit of my meager store of data in order that she might help me to think up the wisest things to do for the man I, his wife, and she his "office manager," were serving.

ANECDOTES OF FAMOUS

As you may have read in the papers, said Sir Harry Lauder recently, I had a splendid reception in Australia.

My, it's a great country. The women, too, are great—some of 'em.

In one of the cities there a tramcar one day collided with a milk cart, and several cans of milk were thrown into the roadway, the milk splashing across the street.

Soon a large crowd gathered. A very short man—just a wee bit smaller than myself—was standing behind a very stout lady, so that he could not see very well what had happened. When at last he did get a glimpse of the milk flowing in the street, he exclaimed, "Gracious! What a waste!"

The stout lady turned round and him. "Mind your own business and don't talk about me!"

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

AS BLANK was going down the street he got an awful shock. It swept him off his feet, this unexpected knock. For something strange had dawned in view, a thing he had not seen since those dear days when war was new, 'way back in 'seventeen. He stopped and stared and then he quoth. "This surely can't be true!" as one who first is shown a sight converting in the zoo. But still he stared him in the face, a thing as large as life, and so he speeded up his pace, to bear the news to Wife. He hastened down the sunny way, regardless of the heat, and loudly yodeled: "Hip, Horray!" on reaching Cut-throat Street. "It's come! It's come!" he cried with glee. "The good old times are here, they bring again for you and me the joys of yesteryear. I saw a sign that made me start, but filled me with content; we soon can move again, dear heart, because it read, 'For Rent'." And Mrs. Blank shed tears of joy as would some shipwrecked soul who sights a sail, cries, "Ship ahoy!" and leaves her place of dole. By Fall the mighty moving van will come into its own and soon the doughty moving man will make us groan and moan.

For once again with blithesome aid he'll toss the kitchen stove upon the grand piano there and slam a trunk above. We'll gaily move three times a year, and for our cellar well spent, with normal times both far and near and good old signs "For Rent." And for we'll settle down again, though taxes still may soar, so folks will all be happy when "For Rent" shines forth once more.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

America's largest industrial corporation will this day week lower wages of unskilled workmen to thirty cents an hour, or at the rate of $1440 for a week of six full days of eight hours each.

In the name of humanity, this should mark the end of "readjustment" in wages throughout what is called the country's most important basic industry.

And are there not abundant grounds for believing that the bottom has been reached in many industries, the bottom in respect to both prices and inactivity?

* * *

The average price level has practically ceased to move downwards in many directions prices show signs of stiffening.

Furthermore, the country's stocks of manufactured goods are admitted by far below normal. Buyers continue to rush into large mercantile centres to procure goods for immediate shipment. They sometimes discover a scarcity.

* * *

Banking pressure to force liquidation has relaxed. There is now infinitely less need for acting or feeling panicky over money matters. Far greater progress than is generally understood has been made in reducing the banking indebtedness of our farming, stock-raising, grain-growing States and also the indebtedness of industrial and commercial concerns. Banking efforts to save large industrial enterprises caught by the sudden collapse in general business have proved remarkably successful, so that the outlook has undergone transformation.

The need for monetary deflation has subsided. The Federal Reserve banks hold larger reserves than at any time in three years; loans and note circulation have been contracted most substantially; and gold continues to pour into this country. Banks are, therefore, in a position to finance all expansion in business now within sight.

* * *

Our last boom brought acute railway congestion. Our railroads are now in a position to handle expeditiously all the traffic that is likely to develop.

Also, the tremendous pressure being brought to bear upon the government to release at once the promised half-billion dollars to the railroads promises to bear fruit. The distribution of this money could not fail to have a stimulating effect in many directions, both industrial and financial. There would be wholesale paying of debts not only by the railroads but by those receiving money from the railroads. And there would be at least moderate placing of steel equipment and other orders, as well as the employment of thousands of workers now idle.

* * *

There is available to cope with the speed for expansion in activity an abundant supply of labor willing to work much more than heretofore only the labor worked before the relapse came. Incidentally, the strike talk now being indulged in by railway labor leaders is not being taken seriously by either the public or railway operators. On the contrary, the latest out announced by the United States Steel Corporation is expected to hasten wage readjustment in other directions to the point which many employers regard as essential before American industry can feel confident of starting a fresh move forward to meet newcomers in the world's markets.

* * *

On the surface, the security markets are doing little to strengthen belief in early recovery in business activity. Dealings in stocks have been intensely dull, and the upward movement which some time ago started in bonds has latterly been the reverse of spectacular. Nevertheless, students of Wall Street doings declare that the market appears to be getting into shape for a new advance. They state that the "floating" supply of securities has become extraordinarily small and that the banks' borrowings of stock exchange commission houses are abnormally light. The deduction they draw is that the stocks which have had to be sold by many business men in need of cash have gone into hands which will not jump back on the market immediately, when a few points profit can be seized.

In other words, it is claimed that the scarcity of supplies which is becoming a feature in some industries is also becoming a feature in the stock market.

* * *

All this is tending to bring about a frame of mind very different from what existed six months ago or a year ago. Deflation was then faced, pessimism and depression then ruled.

What is now looked forward to is recovery. Pessimism is giving way to optimism. In at least some lines tries stagnation has been supplanted by modest activity. Instead of pounding borrowers, the banks are more inclined to make advances calculated to stimulate legitimate business. Nervousness recently caused by wild rumors of impending financial failures has abated, because it is now established that nothing whatsoever of this nature impends.

* * *

Fundamental conditions of this country, however, now warrant confidence, enterprise and extensive activity and employment, as well as enhancement in the market value of all good American securities when that money is becoming more plentiful and cheaper.

Stocks Continue Their Downward Course in Heavy New York Stock Market

FIRM'S FAILURE AFFECTS STOCK PRICES

Most of the Active Issues in Supply and Falling During Early Trading

New York, Aug. 22.—The stock market showed a heavy tone again at the opening today, most of the active issues being in supply and falling. The market was weak all around.

Sentiment was adversely affected at the opening session by the failure of a prominent brokerage firm. Oils, steels, equipments and miscellaneous and food shares denoted fresh liquidation.

Within the first fifteen minutes declines of 1 to 2 1-2 points were registered by Mexican and Pan-American Petroleums, General Asphalt, Baldwin Locomotive, Chandler, Studebaker, Bethlehem Steel, American Sugar, Bethlehem and Crucible Steels as well as General Electric, Retail Stores, Industrial Alcohol and Famous Players also were heavy, and rails started modest fractional losses. The market was only moderately active and trading appeared to center largely the resumption of bearish professional activities following the partial recovery of yesterday and last week. Chili money was 5 1-2.

Notes—Selling progressed steadily during the morning, involving many new low records. These included Sears-Roebuck, Studebaker, Baldwin, Growing States and also the indebtedness of industrial and commercial concerns. Banking efforts to save large industrial enterprises caught by the sudden collapse in general business have proved remarkably successful, so that the outlook has undergone transformation.

The need for monetary deflation has subsided. They state that the "floating" supply of securities has become extraordinarily small and that the banks' borrowings of stock exchange commission houses are abnormally light. The deduction they draw is that the stocks which have had to be sold by many business men in need of cash have gone into hands which will not jump back on the market immediately, when a few points profit can be seized.

In other words, it is claimed that the scarcity of supplies which is becoming a feature in some industries is also becoming a feature in the stock market.

* * *

All this is tending to bring about a frame of mind very different from what existed six months ago or a year ago. Deflation was then faced, pessimism and depression then ruled.

What is now looked forward to is recovery. Pessimism is giving way to optimism. In at least some lines tries stagnation has been supplanted by modest activity. Instead of pounding borrowers, the banks are more inclined to make advances calculated to stimulate legitimate business. Nervousness recently caused by wild rumors of impending financial failures has abated, because it is now established that nothing whatsoever of this nature impends.

* * *

Fundamental conditions of this country, however, now warrant confidence, enterprise and extensive activity and employment, as well as enhancement in the market value of all good American securities when that money is becoming more plentiful and cheaper.

Sugar Market

The decline in the raw sugar market to a basis of 4.50 is regarded as temporary, but if revision should come it may mean lower refined prices. It is evident that the distributing trade is not buying to any considerable amount if the movement is at all representative of the trade as a whole. Refiners, however, are not pressing sales and some advance on the six-cent level.

The unsettlement in the raw sugar market has been followed by declines in the refined market, bears advising a selling policy as to which way the wind will blow.

The steadiness of the opening of the market was chiefly a reflection of continued dry weather in the Southwest, after opening 12 to 22 points higher. The market continued to show strength in the afternoon and trading was about fourteen points over the previous close.

SAYS AUTOMATIC CUT IN WAGES IS UNFAIR

Spillane Quotes Employer as Opposed to Horizontal Plan of Reduction

By RICHARD SPILLANE

Philadelphia, Aug. 22—In announcing the last cut in the wages of laborers of the United States Steel Corporation, Judge Gary says, "Other wages and salaries will be equitably adjusted." It would be interesting to know what the Steel Corporation's ideas are of equitable adjustment. Most of the pay of workers above the grade of rough labor. Opinions vary greatly.

Recently all the high officials of a big Philadelphia concern were called into conference to discuss retrenchment.

The chairman plainly, but tersely, put the situation up to them. Labor had been cut. There had been sharp reduction of forces of employes above the grade of labor. The office staff, brigades, so to speak. Labor had been cut enough. How about the others?

The chairman asked his associates for their ideas.

SIMPLEST METHOD.

One staff officer spoke up promptly. Unquestionably the simplest method would be a horizontal reduction in salaries all along the line, he said. That would be equitable. Every man would be treated alike. The only question to determine was the percentage of the cut.

Each man in turn as called upon agreed with this first until all but one or three had been heard.

Then came the turn of the chairman asked, "Is that your view, too?" responded. "No, emphatically no. I don't think any such plan should be applied to my people. It isn't fair. No normal cut can be fair. All through this organization we have a lot of people brought into it in war days. They came in on inflated values. Everything else being equal they are not entitled to the same consideration as old and faithful employes. There is inequality of pay in every department of the business. I plead guilty to having it in my division. Where on the amount you want cut in the salary expense of my end of this business and I'll bring the total down to the figure you want. There'll be no horizontal reduction. It may be the easiest way, but it isn't the just way. You can't do an automatic job of pruning in industry any more than you can in a flower garden. You have to use judgment as to each particular case.

"Now, at the risk of making myself unpleasant, I'll ask if this cut goes far enough to put me down to the level of my men. I worked in the war period for $1 a year. That was for the government. I'm back to work for $1 a year for this company of ours till things get straight again."

That ended the plan for a horizontal cut galley west.

Sometimes in the cooperate game you'll be told, "Trust in the Lord but keep your powder dry." A good expenditure of the strokes in the dollar sign double cross the S in sympathy is far to be desired. A contract is a contract and an agreement is an agreement. Even in the words of it you have no recourse. Maybe so, but you can't make William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania, believe it. He is one of the big men in the piracy and arson-defying supply business in the East. He has properties in various places.

VOLUNTARILY RAISE RENTAL.

Some years ago the Crane Company, a great concern of Chicago, wanted a plant in Camden, N. J. Anderson agreed to build a structure and rent them on some land he owned. The Chicago people leased the structure for ten years at a stipulated price.

The lease has some few years to run.

Recently Mr. Anderson received a communication from the Crane Company. It read in part:

"Conditions have changed radically since we leased the structure that was built for our use. Taxes have gone up, the cost of heating, lighting and everything has gone up. We are willing as to suggest to us that the terms are not fair to you. For the remaining years of the lease we will voluntarily pay to you 25 per cent. more than the stipulated rental."

Wall Street Briefs

Western Union earnings in 1921 have been $2,780,729 capital stock during the half year to June 30 1921 amounted to $67,067,614, as compared with $7,067,614, or $7 on par above the amount outstanding in 1920. This is equivalent to dividend of $3,000,114, or over 4½ per cent.

Another reduction in the price of sugar is predicted by the Federal Sugar Refining Company.

One house, in acquainting its customers with the purchase of Liberty bonds, declares that "the opportunity to buy bonds for investment or trading purposes has practically ceased to exist." "There is very little buying for a quick turn," says this house. "The majority of buyers are those picking up stocks for a pull of a year or two. These buyers are getting bonds."

$644,847,441 of the gold imported to United States in the first seven months of 1921 came from England, $44,000,000 from Canada and Sweden, $44,028,000; Canada, $31,962,131; Spain, $17,148,750; Holland, $16,035,000; Italy, $101,845,326.

The Guaranty Company has received notice from Consolidated Gas & Electric Light & Power Company of Baltimore, a trading policy as to which way the wind will blow.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NEWS

Hanks will receive proposals until 10 a. m. Aug. 24, for $150,000 notes in anticipation of revenue, dated Feb. 28, 1922.

Hanford 1921 tax rate $48.50, an increase of $4.

Northampton has issued temporary loans in anticipation of revenue of $100,000, dated Aug. 22, 1921, maturing Feb. 24, 1922, to R. L. Maxfield & Co., at 5.42 per cent.

The Hayden Rubber Company Corporation has sold to Hayden, Stone & Company an issue of $1,500,000 of 7 per cent. notes, dated Jan. 1, 1926, convertible into common stock at $125; price, 97½ and interest. The proceeds will fund the expenditures for new plant and working capital. Of the $900,000 Cuban Portland Cement Corporation bonds, $600,000 have been sold, the organization going on same first of the year. The company has also arranged for a $1,000,000 in capital expenditures at the various plants.

Railway Stocks

In the week ending August, 1920, the average price of the twenty railroad stocks most commonly used to measure the market movement was 72. It is now about 72. The investor who bought railroad stocks at that time and held on, while he would not have made big money, would not have suffered a loss and would have almost certainly done if he had held industrial stocks.

A year ago prices for the average price of twenty representative industrial stocks was approximately 110. It is now about 66, a loss of 20 points.

It is found that while most of the railroad stocks have declined, they are at least held steady there were a few sharp setbacks. The recoveries were due largely to the varying percentages of rate increase granted in the November decision. It is a fact that several issues had been somewhat overvalued in speculative moves early this year, and since have been readjusted to nearer their proper relative position; in part the depressed prices by old favorites that have indicated inability to recover former earning power.

B. & M. Equipment

It has been proposed to create an equipment trust to provide for the purchase of fifty locomotives for the B. & M., for which the road had an agreement from the government some months ago to advance $1,212,500 on condition that the road raised a similar amount. The locomotives which it was proposed to buy were chiefly switching and freight locomotives of the Santa Fe type. Owing to high prices the road held off from purchasing, but as the decline in traffic has, for the present at least, reduced the need for additional equipment.

Railway Items

Middle West farmers are receiving appeal by Chicago Livestock Exchanges to restrict shipments of cattle to packing centers, declaring glutation of the trade, it declares, will result from further glutting the market.

Union Pacific Railroad, Omaha, Neb., have been reopened after being closed seven months. About 45 per cent. of old employes will resume work.

Work for 600 Men

The action of the Atchison in putting 600 men back to work in the Topeka railroad shops is taken to mean that the worst depression on the Atchison is ended.

CLEARING HOUSE ADVOCATED FOR EXCHANGE

President Tittoni of Italian Senate Is Speaker Before Institute of Politics

By International News Service.

Williamstown, Aug. 22.—The establishment of international exchange can best be brought about by the establishment of an international clearing house such as that suggested in the plan of Luigi Loscalzo, declared Tommase Tittoni, president of the Italian Senate, in his address before the Institute of Politics today.

Senator Tittoni scored the speculators who he asserted, are the chief opponents of this plan, since it would "prevent audacious speculation from dominating everywhere as it does at present," he said.

Luigi Loscalzo was to constitute this clearing house on the lines of the postal union, which is in fact the only institution that certainly become a great clearing house but does not function on the autocracy and independence of the single States.

With so many disjointed systems of coinage and bank notes it would appear that a universal liquidation of public and private debts is impossible. Nevertheless the Berne office of accounts examines the debts and credits of every allied State and only compensates each State with wonderful ease.

Dividend Declarations

The J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company has declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on preferred, payable October 1, to stock of record September 12.

The Middle States Oil Corporation has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent., payable October 1, to stock of record September 16.

Retail Stores has declared a regular quarterly $1.00 dividend, payable October 1, to stock of record September 15.

Business Seems to Lack Momentum to Make Aggressive Forward Movement

Observers of economical and financial conditions have, for a week or more, been declaring business is "half way around the turning point" and lacks momentum to go forward aggressively.

The News Bureau says the period of deflation seems to have virtually ended, prices are holding pretty well all along the line, and the banks are slowly but surely laid for resumption of buying.

The railroads are affected by loss of traffic and their business has not shown the recovery hoped for. Car loadings reported for the first week in August were 784,781, a decrease of 11,739 from the previous week, of 130,949 from the corresponding week last year, and of 87,292 from the corresponding week in 1919.

Soft coal output for first week of August is estimated at 7,296,000 net tons, a decrease of 56,000 from the previous week. This compares with output during corresponding week of 1919 of 12,130,000 tons and a year ago of 13,432,000 tons. Present rate of production is about 34 per cent. of the 1914 rate.

Pig iron production during the first half of 1921 is reported as 8,320,881 tons, against 13,435,802 in the first half of 1920 and 18,490,285 in second half of 1920. Companies observers claim a stiffening of prices in pig iron which is taken as a barometer of future prices. Recent events point to a turn in steel. One large independent has increased prices from 15 per cent to 40 per cent of capacity, and the Steel corporation has increased from July low of 24 per cent. to over 30 per cent.

For the first time in a month the weekly price average of eight basic pig iron finished products failed to show a decline from the previous week. The average for a group of eight products remained at previous week's level of $49.63, against $52.48 the high for 1920 high and $35.80 in August 1913, a typical pre-war year.

Officials of tire manufacturing companies deny that further price cuts are contemplated. Cuts of 15 to 20 per cent. last May following a general reduction of 15 per cent. in November 1920 have brought prices down to the 1916 level and not more than 5 per cent above record low level of 1915.

Not only is it a question of prices being low, but the public is apparently beginning to buy well, to judge from reports of leading producers.

Though the stock market itself is disappointing enough with its unconscious record of sagging quotations and in a number of instances breaks to new low records it is generally recognized that improvement in the money and bond markets must precede sustained recovery in security values.

ANNOUNCE FAILURE ON NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Aug. 22.—The failure of Tripps & Co. was announced today on the New York Stock Exchange. The firm, which was organized one year ago, is composed of George H. Worcester, William J. Palmer and John J. Gillies.

Heavy Lard Exports

It is understood that immense amounts of lard have been sold for export in the last few weeks, sales being estimated at over 20,000,000 pounds. Packers have changed their methods of doing business, and now consign the product to themselves or their agents in Europe and secure exchange only as the product is sold.

Operating Revenue Slightly Reduced on New Haven and B. & M. Railways

In no field of railroad operation is there more interest at present than in the Interstate Commerce Commission's monthly figures, showing expenditures by carriers in maintaining way, structures and equipment and the relation to total operating revenues.

VETS ARE AIDED IN SECURING WAR CLAIMS

"Clean Up" Campaign Planned by Bureau to Assist Disabled Men

The first task to be undertaken by the veterans' bureau, until recently known as the bureau of war risk insurance, is a nation-wide "clean-up" campaign, which is intended to advise all former service men of their rights under the war risk insurance act, by intervention in their personality.

According to the plans formulated by the director of the bureau, Colonel Charles R. Forbes, every State will be covered by the "clean-up" squads. Each squad is to consist of a medical examiner, a claim agent and insurance claims contact examiner, a third member selected from the office force of the district office, who will act as advance agent for the squad and representatives of the local posts of the American Legion and the local chapters of the Red Cross.

These squads will assist disabled veterans in securing compensation, medical treatment, hospital care, and will assist them in preparing their formal claims for submission to the bureau.

Squad headquarters have been established in the various Congressional districts, where the examinations will be conducted. In each district office a section will operate to expedite the forwarding of Washington of inquiries presented by the squad, and these will be taken care of by a special section established in the bureau of Washington.

Arrangements were completed at a meeting held in the American Red Cross rooms at Worcester for the conduct of the "clean-up" campaign to be held in that city between the dates of October 2 and 12. Steps are under way at the State headquarters of the American Legion and the New England division of the American Red Cross to fully acquaint ex-service persons in the southern part of Worcester County with the purposes of the veterans' bureau as applied to that locality.

Paris Court Refuses to Stop Heiress' Unclad Dancing Career

Paris, Aug. 22.—All attempts of the millionaire Hutchins family to prevent the appearance of their daughter, Solange, the Countess Lastarzi, on the stage at the Folies Bergeres have failed.

The authorities have decided that the girl has a right to say that she prefers the tinsel of the undressy revue on the stage to the gold and glitter of the social life of Paris.

As a consequence the Folies was stormed by Americans and other foreigners, who gasp when the seventeen-year-old American countess appears in the "Fall of Babylon" doing a Bacchanalian dance practically unclothed, amid the tumultuous applause of the usually blase audience.

"All this moral talk is rot," Solange remarked. "I wore more clothes on the 'Follies' stage than most American society women are wearing at Deauville.

GIVES HUNGRY WALTHAM MEN FREE FOOD

Workers Out of Jobs and in Need Find a Friend in William Quinlan

Waltham men who have been caught in the unemployment wave have discovered that one citizen doesn't intend that they shall go hungry, whether they have money or not.

William Quinlan, proprietor of a lunch room at Waltham, has been busy for years feeding men down and out of work. Approximately twenty men come in every day, and each is given a good plate of beans, or a bowl of stew, with rolls and coffee.

MANY MEN BROKE.

"I got the idea when men began coming in and asking if they could do a little work to pay for a meal," said Quinlan. "There are an awful lot of men broke now, and some of them are likely to starve if we don't do something for them. So, whenever a man comes in with a hard-luck story I give him something to eat. Usually you can tell when they're hungry."

No hungry man needs to present any credentials or work any long list of questions to get a meal from Quinlan. The appearance of hunger impresses Quinlan as substantiating his claim to financial embarrassment, the meal is fed, and that's all there is to it.

FED 800 CHILDREN.

Last Thanksgiving Quinlan gave a dinner to 800 children here, at a total cost of $700, and he plans to repeat the performance this year.

It is said that he intends to be a candidate for City Council.

ANNOUNCE ALEXANDER'S ACCESSION TO THRONE

Belgrade, Aug. 22.—A proclamation announcing the accession of King Alexander to the throne of the Serbians, Croats and Slovenes was read in the churches and public squares of this city yesterday.

News of Motion Picture World

By FRIEDA DAVIS

THE REPORT that Dorothy Davenport will return to the screen after several years of domestic life gains interest with the added information that she will appear in films as Mrs. Wallace Reid, instead of Miss Davenport. As Dorothy Davenport she gained quite a following and also was a star with Universal. In those days she was the brilliant member of the family, when Reid was introduced to her as a leading man she complained that the director said he was impossible. She later changed her mind.

Last week Mrs. Reid signed a contract to play opposite Lester Cuneo in "Pal of Paradise," to be made by Doubleday Productions Company. Charles Mack will direct.

Many in the film world point out that this decision to appear as "Mrs. Wallace Reid" would argue that there is nothing in the rumor that she and Wm. Lasky star are preparing to separate.

DILLON'S HANDS FULL.

WHETHER the casting director of the Cosmopolitan Productions cast the Fairbanks Twins for important parts in "The Beauty Shop," he didn't know what he was letting Edward Dillon, the director, in for.

Madelon and Jerrine Fairbanks, who are no newcomers to the screen, by the way, are as alike as the proverbial two peas Dillon doesn't know whether the girl in one scene is the girl he is the same as the girl he is putting through her paces for the next bit or the one who hasn't done any work all day. When he asks them which he is working with at the time, they stand side by side and giggle at him. He's given up worrying about it now. When the scene calls for both twins, that's one thing, but when it calls for one or the other he grabs whichever one is nearest.

MARGOT ASQUITH SPEAKS.

MARGOT ASQUITH again finds the limelight on her. This time it is because she expressed some rather worthwhile than popular opinions on the movies. Mrs. Asquith doesn't approve of half-way measures—see her autobiography for proof—but when she says she does a thing, she says or does it thoroughly.

Watching the filming of Stephen McKenna's novel, "Sonia," the other day, she exclaimed in a loud voice, "What a dreadful life! Not if you paid me a million dollars a minute would I ever go through the monotonous drudgery of acting for the films. The movies are killing art!"

Lady Diana Manners, who is making films, not as a hobby, as so many of her ilk seem to, but as a serious occupation, takes exception to Mrs. Asquith's remarks. "How absurd!" she exclaimed and muttered something about people under thirty not holding such views!

ONE STAR TO ANOTHER.

Jack, as "it takes a crook to catch a crook," it takes a movie star to appreciate the work of another movie star.

Betty Blythe went to see "The Old Nest" at the Astor Theatre in New York some time ago. She and Mary Alden, who is scoring such a hit as the mother of this picture, are close friends in Hollywood.

When post cards were passed among the audience during the intermission as a form of exploitation, she took the opportunity to write to Miss Alden:

"This is intermission, my dear, and we are thrilled to death. I've wept every week you've wept. You are wonderful, wonderful, Mary. Will write again tomorrow. Clothes are not. Characterization the best we've ever had. Love, Betty."

LION STUFF.

MAKING pictures with the "cats" may be thrilling, but as a steady thing it isn't. Elmo Lincoln's idea of unadulterated bliss. Last week the head of the great Western Producing Company, which makes the Tarzan features, received word of the existence of that reigned on the Tarzan premises a few days ago.

During the shooting of scenes laid in Jungle city of gold, three lions attacked several players working as Arabians, badly scaring and clawing them. Those men were rushed to the hospital and it was reported that they would recover.

At the time of the accident there were twelve lions and two leopards on the set. Elmo Lincoln, the star, and his leading lady, Louise Lorraine, were directly in the path of the "cats." Miss Lorraine rushed for a balcony at the back of the set and tried to pull herself out of the way. Lincoln made a flying leap above her and dragged her after him away from the claws. Several cameras were destroyed in the mixup and all the film taken that day was completely lost.

CAMERA CLICKS.

J. WARREN KERRIGAN, who at one time won every popularity contest he went into, has decided to "come back" to the screen. He will be starred in a series of pictures produced by the Fred B. Warren Corporation.

KATHLEEN KIRKHAM'S dark beauty is being covered very successfully these days by a huge blonde wig. She is appearing as the "other woman" in the next Mae Murray picture, "The Happy Ending." When she wears her wig and makeup home, as many of the Hollywood players do, she passes her friends unrecognized.

CONNECTICUT GRETNA GREEN OUTLAW FIRE

Greenwich, Ct., Aug. 22.—This town, connected facetiously as "Gretna Green," is under fire of criticism by newspapers in all sections of the State, because of the "marriage" in an editorial, blames the local town clerk and justices of the peace. It points to eighty-one marriages in July in seventy of which the five-day law was waived. In the past month or two, three bigamists have been married here and that young women under age have been allowed to marry.

NEW SOUTH AMERICAN DRINK HITS WESTFIELD

Westfield, Aug. 22.—A new drink from Argentina, which carries with it a wallop equivalent to tea and coffee and one drink of which a human being can subsist for days, has arrived here. Professor Louis H. Allyn, noted local food expert, believes it should supplant the other sprees which have been popular here since prohibition. The new beverage is a combination of yerba mate, used for 500 years, has been a popular concoction in the South American Republic.

30,000 COLORED ELKS INVADE BOSTON

Formal Exercises of 22d Annual Convention Open Today in Faneuil Hall

Boston today officially extended the right hand of fellowship to 30,000 members of the colored Elks' organization here for their twenty-second annual convention.

They come from all parts of the United States, the Bahamas and Philippines. Formal exercises will be conducted in Faneuil Hall at 2 o'clock this afternoon, at which State, city and national representatives will participate.

Grand Exalted Ruler W. F. McMechin of Baltimore presides at the opening Grand Lodge business session this morning. The annual sermon was delivered by Grand Chaplain C. G. Cummings. Two adult delegates at the Shawmut Congregational Church, South End, Sunday afternoon.

Tuesday afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock, city and State officials will review the pageant and parade, which starts from barrier and Tremont. A treat will be given at Frederick Douglas square, South End, at 11 p. m.

Wednesday the championship baseball game will be staged at the Columbus avenue grounds at 3 o'clock, followed by the grand ball in Mechanics building in the evening.

A reception will be tendered new grand Lodge officers at Ruggles Hall, Roxbury, Thursday. Sightseeing tours around Greater Boston, and a picnic at Spring Grove, Wellesley, will comprise Friday's program.

The visiting Elks will fete "Noah" Cornish, famous Harvard athlete, who recently shattered the world's record in the broad jump at the International Harvard-Yale-Cambridge-Oxford track meet, at the dancing carnival in the Boston Arena tonight.

Cornish will be presented a silver loving cup by a physicians' organization, and a gold watch by a citizens' committee. The testimonial is sponsored by Drs. Matthew B. Laithwaite, S. T. Taylor, Benjamin E. Robinson and Dr. Alfred Russell.

$1,785,000 FOR NEW HARVARD HEALTH SCHOOL

Rockefeller Foundation's Gift Provides Increased Opportunities for Research

The Rockefeller Foundation announces an initial gift of $1,785,000 to Harvard University for the establishment of a school of public health. The Faneuil Hall announcement of the gift reads in part as follows:

"The new school will provide opportunities for research, will unify existing courses and will offer new or extended teaching facilities in public health administration, vital statistics, immunology, bacteriology, medical zoology, physiological hygiene and communicable diseases."

"An excellent general course for the training of public health officers, as well as special courses in preventive medicine, in tropical medicine and industrial hygiene, have already been developed at Harvard. The work has been hampered, however, by lack of adequate funds, and by uneven growth."

The new building of the school, the university hopes to secure an existing building of very suitable character for the purpose adjacent to the Medical School. Funds for the purchase and equipment of the building will be drawn from the gift of the Rockefeller Foundation.

In addition, the school, through co-operative relations with a number of manufacturing and commercial corporations, will be able to offer the students practical experience in industrial hygiene."

SUDBURY GIRL WEDS IN OKLAHOMA CITY

Sudbury, Aug. 22.—Rev. and Mrs. George H. Bowles of Sudbury announce the marriage if their daughter, Miss Caroline Belcher Charles, to Nelson J. Sanford of Melrose. The ceremony was performed at Oklahoma City, Okla., before the bride and bridegroom were students at Boston University.

NORFOLK DOWNS MAY GET TROLLEY LINE AGAIN

The partial reopening of the Norfolk Downs trolley line by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, which for several Sundays has run cars from Quincy Square to Wollaston Beach at Beach street, by way of Hancock street, Elm avenue and Billings road, has proved so much of a success that it is possible the road may reopen the entire loop.

Several years ago the road discontinued the line because it was said it did not pay.

Large numbers of people, however, have patronized the line to the beach.

Why Does a Man Love Two Women?

Madame Gina Lombroso-Ferrero Asks the Question

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Millions of women will read with intense interest, and men also, an article by Madame Ferrero, wife of the Italian historian, daughter of Lombroso, scientific student and teacher. The article "Why a man loves two women," is published in Hearst's Magazine for September.

Madame Ferrero discusses a question that has puzzled historians and scientists for many a day. To her question "Why a man loves two women" your answer off hand might be, "He does not. As soon as there is a second there is NO LOVE."

But Madame Ferrero is taking men as she finds them, dealing with their own queer ideas, which includes the idea that it is impossible to love two women, or ten, or more at the same time.

King Solomon thought that he could love a thousand—foolish, not wise, King Solomon.

Of a hundred masculine fools ninety-nine imagine that they are not understood, and that some second woman will supply the lack of understanding.

"Love is the great misunderstanding—the tragedy of most people's lives. Love means something vastly different to man and to woman."

Every woman knows the difference. To men, love means SOMETHING. To women it means EVERYTHING. For if IT goes, everything goes, since the welfare of the children remains upon its remaining.

"Man is quite capable of dying from love, of killing himself or others because he cannot get or because he loves the woman he loves. But he never dies or kills in order to make a woman happy. It is always out of despair at not having won her, or out of spite, or vengeance."

That may hurt some men's feelings, but it is true. Man will often sacrifice his life to save that of a woman. It means showing off and reaching for admiration, usually. Occasionally, rarely, it means the rare affection of which women think and write, but rarely see.

Madame Ferrero, thoroughly educated, scientifically analyzing, thinks part of the trouble is in the difference between men and women.

As a matter of fact, neither men nor women are to blame. It is not man's fault that his love so frequently causes misery, nor it it woman's fault that man does not understand her.

For just as men and women are different physically, as their brains differ, so differ their ways of looking at things. But it is the tendency of every human being to imagine that others feel as he feels himself. And so man imagines that woman finds pleasure in love in the way that he finds it, and woman imagines that if a man loves her, it must be in the same whole-hearted way that she loves him.

We cannot hope much from man's reasons. That is the warning Madame Ferrero gives to other women.

Because what man calls love springs primarily from his senses, it is such a fleeting, unstable feeling. It is a passing, although often brilliant and extremely ardent, flame. It flickers and changes even when it is violent and sincere. Love is strongest in a man while he is young and the thirst of enjoyment is strongest within him—it grows weaker in later years, when this thirst is appeased.

A man's promises in love cannot be counted on. His love is not based on reason but on passing emotions, and no one can control sentiments that are not inspired by reason.

Luckily for the world, past, present and future, woman's idea of love and of the relationship between men and women is infinitely higher than that of men. A man means well, but can rarely stick to it. A woman means well at the beginning, and all the way through, if man will let her.

Madame Ferrero writes:

Woman's conception of love, which makes moral and mental attraction predominate or at least accompany physical attraction, is the bulwark which has kept society and the family throughout the ages. And the eternal illusion that man's view of love is the same as hers makes woman disdain or hesitate to make use of the easy and indecorous weapons which she has at hand to excite the senses of man.

Madame Ferrero thinks that:

"Because woman confuses love, admiration and respect, man, in order to win her, is bound to give out the best within him, and most of the great works of art or science which form the world's intellectual baggage were created under the stimulus of woman's love and its demands. Because man realizes that the surest way to a woman's heart is to do something worth while, he has gone bravely to battle, written books, molded clay, has given his money to worthy purposes, has benefited humanity."

There is everything in that statement. Savages kill the lion instead of running away, as they want to do, because they want the savage lady to admire them, even more than they want safety.

Men have gradually changed from tangled hair, big jawed, long toothed monstrosities to the half civilized creatures they are today, because they are put in a woman's arms the minute they are born, to stay in her arms, or on her knees for the first three years, and hanging to her petticoat for the next six—that helps to civilize them.

Woman and man both will read with intense interest Madame Ferrero's analysis of men and women in HEARST'S MAGAZINE FOR SEPTEMBER. And each will answer in his or her way the question, "Why a man loves two women?"

This writer's answer is, HE DOES NOT love two women.

If you ask, "Why does a monkey love two female monkeys?" the answer would be "because he is a monkey." In every man there are various monkeys locked up. Serious monkeys like goodness, and therefore seek ONE kind of women. The foolish, lower type of monkey likes frivolity, and therefore seeks ANOTHER type of woman.

When real men appear on the surface of the earth, Madame Ferrero will no longer ask her question.

For the present, such a discussion, "Why a man loves two women," published in the SEPTEMBER number of HEARST'S MAGAZINE, is as interesting to men and women, women especially, as anything you will read in many a day.

Duty of Every Business Firm to Aid Cuneo Fund

Send in $100 and Let It Be Shown That Community Stands Back of the City's Guardians

More than upon any other class in Greater Boston there rests upon the business element an especial obligation to aid the fund which the Boston American is raising for the family of Andrew B. Cuneo, policeman, who was murdered while doing his duty to his city.

More than any other class in Greater Boston the business element need that sense of security and protection in the enjoyment of its own, that comes in the long run from such deeds of heroic bravery and loyal self-sacrifice, as that of Cuneo's.

It is, therefore, the business element which should, first of all, make it plain to every member of the police force that the decent men and women of the community are back of them when they obey orders even at the cost of their own lives.

Every business firm should contribute to the Cuneo Fund as evidence to the police that when duty is done at the expense even of life itself, the city stands ready to make sure that the family of the dead officer shall not suffer.

Scores of businessmen already have contributed to the fund. Many have contributed $100 as individuals. But more than this is needed. There should be a concerted movement among Boston business firms to show that when such men as Cuneo pay the last great debt to duty their loved ones will become, in a sense, the wards of the rest of us, and will not be thrown upon the world's cold charity.

That is one of the many reasons why every business firm should send a check to the Cuneo Fund.

General Smuts' Appeal

Situation in Ireland Differs From That He Cites in South Africa History

The appeal of General Smuts, Premier of South Africa, to Mr. De Valera, President of the Irish Republic, to accept the offer of Great Britain of Dominion Home Rule, is persuasive in its phrasing, and especially in the example which he cites from the history of South Africa.

But the comparison between the Irish situation and the situation in South Africa is more superficial than real. It is true, that the British were guilty of frightful brutalities, ghastly barbarism, in the conquest of Transvaal. Her military honor will never be able to live down the shame and disgrace and cowardice with which the war against the Boers was conducted, all for the mess of pottage.

But there was a very great body of Englishmen who repudiated the conduct of the war and its objects. That body of Englishmen belonged to a definite and powerful and ancient party, the Liberals. David Lloyd George himself was one of the leaders of the Liberal Party. His speech in the House of Commons in denunciation of the brutality and cowardice and the shame of the British army in South Africa will live in history. The charges which he makes of the massacre of women and children and the ruthless destruction of property in Transvaal were unequaled by any charges which the English ever brought against the Germans during the late war.

They appealed to the country and overturned the party guilty of these atrocities in South Africa. The Liberal Party thus coming into power, practically turned the whole of South Africa over to the Boers.

So by the settlement of the war and in payment of its outrages, the guiltless party in England gave the Boers more than they ever had before. Being a practical people, no wonder they accepted it under the empire. As a matter of fact, originally they had no foreign policy. They lost nothing and gained everything.

Now the situation is entirely different in Ireland. The offer is being made by the man most guilty of all of the atrocities in Ireland, and by the party which has backed him. There is nothing with which to compensate Ireland for the wrongs done. Not only are they not giving Ireland more than she had in the days of her independence, as they gave Smuts' Boers, but are giving her less, and are leaving in her side to fester and gangrene that old poisonous sore into which any hostile British government can inject more poison at any moment, Ulster.

We do not call public attention to this distinction because we wish Mr. De Valera and his associates to reject the British peace proposal, but because we wish that British propaganda be not able to prevent the American public from seeing both sides of the question.

Lodge a Good Appointment

Senator Eminently Fit to Represent the United States at Disarmament Conference

We are very glad indeed that President Harding has appointed Senator Lodge to be one of the representatives of the United States at the coming conference on disarmament which will be held late this Fall at Washington.

No newspaper has ever criticized Senator Lodge more severely for his attitude on domestic questions than the Boston American. We do not withdraw any unfavorable comments we have ever made concerning Senator Lodge's votes and opinions on matters strictly domestic. From our point of view, he has exhibited concerning internal questions a cynicism and indifference to the rights and the interests of the majority of American people inconsistent with patriotism.

But on the other hand, we have noticed that his partisanship and his apparent indifference to the public interests stop at our frontiers. So far as we can recall, he has sought no party and no personal or political advantage in the consideration of any subject which reached beyond the border. Above all, we have not observed that disgusting sycophancy to things that are British, generally exhibited by Anglophiles for the purpose of showing some kind of social "class."

Senator Lodge is self-respecting and intelligent enough to know that waters do not rise above their source, and that Americans who belittle America or who fail to stand up for America's rights so long as justice will permit, gain no respect for themselves, even from the British sources where they seek by their petty treasons to curry condescension.

But Lodge will bring to the conference a great deal more than mere independence of the illicit British influence. He will bring to the conference his experience in public affairs, which is now spread over nearly half a century, his especial experience in foreign affairs as a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the most powerful legislative body in the world, and his scholarly disposition which we may assume has led him to equip himself for the problems within the scope of his special duty so that he may be the equal of the best among the foregathering strangers.

Glacier Guards Mt. Everest

By Colonel Howard Bury,

Leader of the Mt. Everest Expedition

Conclusion of dispatch begun in Saturday's Boston American describing the progress of the Mt. Everest expedition in its attempt to climb the world's tallest peak.

(Special cable dispatch, copyrighted and sent by the Mt. Everest Committee, Publishers.)

TINGRI DZONG, Tibet, July 16.—By runner to Phari, India, thence via Simla, Aug. 14.—Even supposing the ridge summits at 25,000 to 26,000 feet were gained, there yet remains some of the most difficult rock climbing at still greater heights before the sunmit of the mountain could be attained. Hard rock climbing at great heights is practically an impossibility. It demands too much from the human frame in highly rarified air, and the extra exertion demanded is impossible.

July 7 the weather was most favorable for reconnaissance. The mornings were clear until about ten, and then again in the evenings about sunset the peaks stood out wonderfully clear and sharp cut. The last rays of the setting sun lingered many minutes on the topmost cliffs of the highest mountain in the world after the other peaks had all turned grey and cold.

During this period Mr. Mallory and Mr. Bullock were able to do some most useful work training the coolies, exploring the neighboring glaciers and climbing the surrounding peaks.

Ascended Peak

On July 5 they succeeded in climbing a peak more than 23,000 feet high just above the camp. Starting at 4.15 in the morning, they reached the summit at 2.45 p. m.

The coolies who accompanied them showed distressing signs and were unable to reach the summit. The whole party, however, got back to the camp at 7.15 p. m. It was a fine piece of hard work.

Since July 7 the rainy season has been upon us. We have had frequent hail and rain showers, with snow at the upper camps. The visibility consequently has been poor and reconnaissance work hindered; however, now and then there are bright intervals in which useful work can be done. By the end of the month the northwestern approaches to Mount Everest ought to be sufficiently explored.

Seeking Pass

August will be devoted to the eastern and northeastern faces of the mountain, which have more ice and snow on them than the northwestern side. It is possible there may be a high pass which will lead from Rongbuk glacier over the intervening ridge or ridges into the valley of KhartaTsangpo, but it is quite impossible to get any accurate information out of the Thibetans.

Toward the end of July the base camp is being moved round to near Kharta, which is a collection of villages in the Arun Valley, near the place where the Kharta Tsangpo, the largest glacier stream I have yet met, joins the Arun River.

Other parties meanwhile have been busy each on its own particular "shoot." By now surveyors have mapped more than 6,500 square miles of new country. Details of their activities, however, must be reserved for the next dispatch.

YOU CAN'T BE A HERMIT

There are some persons so unable to find anyone who meets their desires and ideas of a friend that rather than "take up" as they say, with someone short of the sort they like, will isolate themselves and live in seclusion.

But to be entirely happy one must have companionship, so the secluded one becomes more and more eccentric as time passes.

Bigoted, through ignorance of what is going on in other people's minds, they become narrow and unprogressive and all desire to do something good for humanity is dulled.

Remember that someone in the world needs you or you would not be here.

All you can do is to be of service to each and every one who comes within your intimate knowledge in the hope that you may reach that one.

You cannot find anyone who is perfect, not even yourself.

Trying to avoid others because you do not like them is foolish.

Even you could not be all that you expect of your friend.

Disposal of City Garbage

Editor Boston American:

The City Record is advertising for bids to collect and dispose of garbage for ten years more by private concerns. The bids will open September 6 at 12 o'clock. Are you willing that the political atmospheric stench shall assail your nostrils for another decade?

That is just what we are up against unless a movement is started at once to compel the city to take over the collection, rendering, incinerating and disposal of all offal, garbage and city waste in a modern, decent, sweet-smelling manner. The health department ought to handle the matter all the way through, or else a separate commission. Large industries have proven the value of wastes and by-products.

At present non-residents and non-citizens are reaping a harvest. District contractors hire alien help at small wages. Some sections of the city get direct city service, while others suffer indignities and abuses from district contractors who hire alien help. Some districts are selected as dumpage grounds for offensive offal in spite of public protest. This has gone on for years. Will the public press and decent citizens of standing and importance allow the thing ten years more of maggoty life? Let's see.
